Police Hold Son-in-Law In Murder Of Oakes

Rich Mineowner Was Hit 4 Times On Head; Bed Had Been Set Afire

By the Associated Press

Nassau, Bahamas, July 9.—Alfred de Marigny was booked by police here tonight on a charge of killing his father-in-law, the multimillionaire British Baronet Sir Harry Oakes.

A formal charge of murder was placed against the bearded de Marigny, who denied any connection with the slaying.

Oakes was known to have been unhappy over the marriage of his oldest daughter Nancy, then 17 years old, to de Marigny at New York in May, 1942. It was the second marriage for de Marigny.

He was arrested at 6 p. m., tonight by Lieut. Col. R. A. Lindop and Maj. Embert Pemberton of the Nassau constabulary.

Capt. E. W. Melchen of the Miami police department, summoned by plane to aid in the investigation after Sir Harry's body was found on a bed which had been set afire Thursday morning, said the arrest and charge were based on "hair analysis, fingerprints and interrogation."

Attorney General Eric Hallinan reported that Sir Harry had been bludgeoned to death. There were four severe head wounds, he said, as well as burns on the body.

One of World's Richest Men

Officers believed an electric fan had blown out the flames before they destroyed the bed.

The charge against De Marigny came as a sensational climax to the death of Sir Harry, one of the world's richest men with a fortune unofficially estimated to be as great as 200 million dollars.

Until the announcement came, details of the slaying had been withheld, and the case had become a mystery which puzzled outsiders.

James O. Barker, Miami police captain summoned along with Melchen, reported that De Marigny vehemently denied any implication in the crime.

The yacht racer and sportsman, who wears a Van Dyke beard, was arrested at the Oakes home. Barker said he had been under constant surveillance since Oakes' body was found.

De Marigny formerly used the title count, but later dropped the designation. He had the title on his native island of Mauritius, British colony in the Indian Ocean.

Barker said two other persons had been suspected, but that police

Commissioners Find Way to Draw Checks Against July Payroll

For Lower Brackets

Pay for some 4100 District employes will be available today as the District Commissioners adopted a plan to draw checks against the July payroll to relieve employes in the lower pay brackets who have not drawn a pay check in weeks.

Means also were found to give back-pay to most firemen and policemen.

Although some of the employes still must rely upon savings or loans to see them through until the President signs the urgent deficiency appropriation bill that will release funds for June salaries, the lowest paid—theoretically those with the smallest resources—will receive 75 per cent of their July 1-9 wages. These will include janitors, elevator operators and other custodial workers.

Most of the firemen and policemen who were not paid for the last week of June will be paid from funds still on hand from the 1943 appropriation.

Since there is only $139,000 of the $180 000 needed to meet the entire police payroll, none of it has been released. Today, however, by continuing to hold up the

Mrs. J. R. Devereux's Grandson Joins Service As Naval Air Cadet

Mrs. John R. Devereux, 73-year-old mother of the Wake Island hero, is placing a new star on the already crowded service flag which hangs in the window of 1 West Bradley Lane, Chevy Chase, Md.

The eleventh blue star is for Joseph S. Devereux, jr., recently sworn into the Navy as an air cadet. Joseph, her third grandson to join America's fighting forces, was graduated from Landon School in June. He expects to receive orders to report for preflight training sometime next month. His ultimate goal is to become a Marine Corps flier and avenge the fate of his uncle, Lieut. Col. James P. Devereux, now a Jap prisoner in a camp near Shanghai. One of the last messages he sent from Wake Island before it fell December 22, 1941, was "send us more Japs."

Mrs. Devereux has three other sons in the service:

Capt. John R. Devereux, Army Air Force, of Chevy Chase now stationed at Montgomery, Ala.

Capt. J. Ashton Devereux, Army Air Force, of Baltimore, stationed at Newark Airport, Newark, N. J.

Flight Officer Tristram Devereux, Royal Canadian Air Force, also of Chevy Chase, Md.

Mrs. Devereux also has two grandsons already in the service:

Pvt. First Class John R. Devereux 3d, Marine Corps who is stationed somewhere in the Pacific.

Lieut. Richard H. Jeschke, jr., Marine Corps, stationed at Quantico.

There are three sons-in-law:

Allied Headquarters in the Southwest Pacific (Saturday), July 10.—More than 100 American bombers teamed with destroyers and artillery Friday in giving the Japanese air base of Munda and its perimeter of defenses on New Georgia Island a three-way pounding.

The heavy attacks were intended to soften up that key base in the central Solomons for our ground forces which already have landed on New Georgia on two sides and now are consolidating positions prior to applying a pincers.

Avenger torpedo bombers and Dauntless dive-bombers in great force loosed more than 70 tons of bombs ranging up to 2000 pounders on Japanese bivouacs and supply dumps. Four-engine bombers hit other Jap bases to the north.

The destroyers maneuvered in treacherous waters just off Munda base before dawn yesterday, subjecting the Japanese to an intensive shelling of the kind the enemy dislikes the most.

Patrol Clashes Frequent

On the ground our patrols infiltrating through the jungle frequently contacted the Japanese on the Munda side of the island and to the North, near Rice Anchorage, where one of our two landings was made. One clash the day before was within three miles of the air field.

Rout of 45 Zeros seeking to raid our positions below Munda, on Rendova Island, Allied aerial pounding of bases above Munda which might supply it air support, and continuous bombing of Japanese jungle positions before Salamaua, New Guinea, were other highlights of today's report from the battle fronts.

The softening-up process against the Munda area started shortly after dawn yesterday. Flight after flight of Avengers and dive-bombers swept over green jungle positions to drop all types of bombs.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's spokesman termed it the heaviest

Joint Report

Ship Losses In June Hit 19-Mo. Low

By the Associated Press

In the war's most optimistic report on the battle against U-boats, the British and American governments jointly announced last night that Allied ship losses in June were the lowest in 19 months and U-boats so scarce on convoy routes that the hunt for them was turned to Axis home waters.

"Sinkings of Axis submarines were substantial and satisfactory," it was added.

Guardedly, the announcement refrained from saying, even by implication, that the antisubmarine war is won, but after reciting the June record it succinctly observed that "antisubmarine vessels and aircraft are coming into service in considerable numbers."

Coming on top of a highly successful record of antisubmarine operations in May, last night's announcement made it clear in any event that the war against U-boats is going so well that the Allies can substantially increase the flow of weapons from the North American continent to the invasion

Cologne Gets 119th Beating From the Air

Total Bomb Tonnage Rained on Industrial Center Reaches 33,000

London (Saturday), July 10 (AP). For the second successive night, Royal Air Force bombers roared over Germany last night, it was announced today.

By Lowell Bennett
International News Service Staff Writer

London, July 9.—The Rhineland city of Cologne, world's most bombed city, received more than 1000 tons of bombs last night, virtually devastating the industrial center's remaining war factories.

Air circles declared Thursday night's blockbuster raid simply added the finishing touches to the job of eliminating this vital manufacturing city from the Reich's war effort. The assault, Cologne's 119th of the war, brought to approximately 33,000 tons the weight of explosives rained on its industries.

Only eight R. A. F. bombers failed to return from the night's missions.

The operations broke a four-night recess in the Britain-based air offensive against Europe, necessitated by inclement weather. Shortly after the heavyweights re-

Heavily Reinforced Enemy Suffers Severe Losses On Three Fronts

By Lynn Heinzerling

London (Saturday), July 10.—Russian armies bloodily beat off savage German attacks all along the Orel and Kursk fronts yesterday, held their own in the Belgorod sector to the south, and destroyed 193 Nazi tanks and 94 planes in the great battle of attrition, the Soviet command announced early today.

The German dead, in two battle areas specifically mentioned, were nearly 5000 for the day, Moscow declared in the regular midnight communique recorded here by the Soviet monitor, thus bringing to about 40,000 the total German casualties for five days of violent action.

German losses in materiel also were rising to tremendous proportions: Yesterday's destruction raised to 2036 the number of enemy tanks thus far listed as knocked out, and to 904 the number of Nazi planes smashed since the beginning of the offensive.

Nazis Bring Up Reserves

In the Orel-Kursk sector, said the bulletin, the Nazis, after four days of heavy losses, had "gained no success" and had been forced to shift the weight of attack to other areas, reinforcing their "battered troops" by nine infantry divisions and one tank division.

A score or more of German attacks were beaten off—13 of them in a single area of action—and fighting at times was hand-to-hand.

Near Belgorod—scene of four previous German penetrations against which the Russians battered all day—no further Nazi progress was reported although it was declared the invaders were "bringing into battle all their reserves, striving at any cost to achieve success."

Soviet bombers pounded German troop, tank and convoy concentrations all along the whole front in day and night attacks. One Moscow broadcast declared that in Thursday night's attacks the enemy "suffered heavy casual-

American, British, Canadian Forces Land Under Cover Of Aerial and Naval Assault; 300,000 Axis Troops on Island

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Allied troops landed early today on the Italian Island of Sicily in "the first stage in the liberation of the European Continent," it was announced simultaneously by the War Department here and by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's headquarters in North Africa.

The assault on the nearest stepping-stone island to Italy was made by American, English and Canadian soldiers and was preceded by heavy aerial and naval bombardment of the selected sites.

The Algiers radio in a broadcast to North America, recorded by U. S. Government Monitors and reported by the Associated Press, said the Allied forces had landed on the rock-studded western tip of Sicily, 260 miles from Rome.

It was believed here that the Axis force on the island numbered 300,,000 men, and that the reducing of the garrison would be a difficult one.

Eisenhower Appeals to French

In conjunction with the disclosure of the invasion of Sicily, Eisenhower made an appeal to the people of France not to rise in revolt and expose "yourselves to reprisals through premature action." He warned them to verify carefully the "news you receive" because "when the hour of action strikes, we will let you know" via the Algiers radio.

All Allied landings were preceded by weeks of air raids to soften up the defenses for the invasion. Air fields, ports, communications and supply concentrations have received punishing raids, similar to those which preceded the fall of Pantelleria.

There was no hint, either here or in North Africa, as to where the Allied forces landed, nor to the type of troops involved. It was thought likely that parachute soldiers and glider-borne troops might be used to capture airports and harbor installations.

Military men here believe that the landings were made at many points, with the main objectives being Palermo, main port in the northwestern section of the island; Messina, the ferry port nearest the toe of Italy, and the big Gerbini air field with its four subsidiary fields.

The Allied commander in chief in North Africa served notice that for the moment Sicily was the only objective in the following broadcast addressed "announcement to the Frenchmen of France:"

"First Stage Is Liberation"

"Anglo-American-Canadian armed forces have today launched an offensive against Sicily. It is the first stage in the liberation of the European continent. There will be others.

"I call on the French people to remain calm, not to allow themselves to be deceived by the false rumors which the enemy might circulate. The Allied radio will keep you informed on military developments. I count on your sang-froid and on your sense of discipline. Do not be rash, for the enemy is watching. Keep on listening and never heed rumors. Verify carefully the news you receive.

"By remaining calm and by not exposing yourselves to reprisals through premature action, you will be helping us effectively. When the hour of action strikes, we will let you know. Till then, help us by following our instructions. That is to say: Keep calm, conserve your strength. We repeat: When the hour of action strikes, we will let you know."

War Department aides would not comment on which were the invasion points, and Eisenhower's only elaboration was that air raids preceded the landings of ground troops escorted by naval forces which bombarded the coast defenses during the assault.

Military circles here estimated that the task of reducing the island's garrison might be long and costly, emphasizing that there were approximately 60,000 Germans and the rest Italians. The total Axis garrison of 300,000 is nearly the size of the enemy force which was conquered in Tunisia.

Interest was expressed here last night in the announcement that

Leaders Hope to Unify Congress In Stand on Postwar Policy

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

A declaration of policy on postwar aims that would lift the whole issue out of politics and next year's political campaign yesterday was placed high on the agenda of the fall session of Congress.

One goal of early action, it was indicated, was a bipartisan "lasting peace" formula that would enable both political parties to write similar planks into their 1944 platforms.

A formula that possibly may meet the test—the Fulbright resolution—already has been favorably reported by the House Foreign Affairs Committee, but some congressional spokesmen said they were not wedded to any given set of words so long as the common goal of unity is attained.

A campaign to put stronger teeth into the Fulbright resolution has been launched by Senate sponsors of the more specific Ball-Burton-Hatch-Hill- ("B-2 H-2") resolution, who have arranged to tour the country during the recess, teaming with House members in postwar speeches. Proponents of the milder House resolution also have arranged to take the stump. Both "public education" campaigns are calculated to build support for at least some congressional commitment that many feel has been too long postponed.

Senator Tom Connally (Democrat) of Texas, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, predicted yesterday that his own group probably will approve a "stronger" resolution than the House declaration. Connally said this did not mean that he favored injecting points that might lead to prolonged and bitter congressional dispute. Connally frequently has recommended international policing as part of any postwar setup, but believes it would be unwise to provoke a controversy by forcing action on details. He said the Senate resolution, like the House, will probably be general in character.

Representative Sol Bloom (Democrat) of New York, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, meanwhile offered to ask a bipartisan group from his committee to meet jointly with a Senate Foreign Relations Committee unit, in an effort to draw language acceptable to both houses.

The Fulbright resolution was unanimously reported by the House committee, but Bloom pointed out that it is still subject to committee change by amendment up to the time it is considered by the House. The House Foreign Affairs chairman expressed hope that the postwar resolution could go before both Houses in much the same form to reduce controversy to a minimum. He said any bitterly dissenting speeches

Georgian Protests

Roosevelt Stymies Cox's Probe Of FCC by 'Freezing' Files

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt's orders yesterday barred Army, Navy and budget official from furnishing files and testimony demanded by the House Committee investigating the Federal Communications Commission, and Committee Chairman Cox (Democrat) of Georgia formally protested the action as a frustration of Congress.

The President's instructions were revealed by letters from Undersecretary of War Patterson and Undersecretary of the Navy Forrestal, and by the personal testimony of Budget Director Smith. Each said the President's orders held that to obey the committee's call for files and other evidence to support earlier charges that the FCC had endangered the security of military intelligence, would be against "the public interest."

Charman Cox, emphasizing the words "public interest" in contrast with military security, said the President's action had raised these questions:

"Where rests the power to determine what the public interest is? Is it a power that belongs to the Government or to only one branch of the Government? Is Congress to be rendered powerless to determine for itself what is or is not in the public interest? If this be so, then who is to legislate in the public interest—or is there to be no legislation at all?"

If the President could limit his committee, Cox protested, he could do it to a standing committee of Congress. He said the committee had not asked and would not have accepted "for public exposure" any military information. He said the committee would not insist at present on testimony from Army and Navy officials or production of their records, but that this policy would be limited only to the two military

Food Chiefs Seek to Hold Down Costs, Avoid Another Revolt

The Administration's food front high command last night was reported studying methods of holding consumer food costs to a minimum during the congressional recess without inviting another Capitol revolt in the fall.

The President's hands were left completely free on food price "rollbacks" and subsidies by the Commodity Credit bill which passed Congress Thursday, but doubt was expressed in congressional quarters that this power would be used indiscriminately.

Some CCC bill conferees felt they had assurances that the rollback program would not be expanded beyond present plans, but it was learned that there was never any binding Administration commitment in this regard.

One plan known to be under serious study is "stabilization" of prices of the vital foods necessary to everyone's diet, so that lower bracket families, regardless of a general rise in costs, will be assured of minimum nutrition.

The minimum list would include besides meat and butter, already rolled back, milk, bread and probably two or three fresh vegetables. At least in the case of vegetables, it was said, this might be accomplished by use of maximum price machinery without rollback subsidies.

Some Administration advisers felt action along these lines was especially urgent now, in view of withholding tax cuts in pay envelopes that started last week. Consumers would have less ready money to pay grocery bills, it was pointed out, and certainly in the case of lower income groups would sharply feel the pinch of higher food prices.

Congressional Administration leaders felt that precisely this con-

Helena Went Down With Guns Blazing

Eyewitness Describes Heroic End Of Only U. S. Ship Lost in Kula Gulf

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters in Australia (Saturday), July 10.—Another name—that of the fighting cruiser Helena—can be added to the list of warships famous in American history.

The dying moments of the ship that went down with guns still firing on the enemy were the most dramatic of the decisive American naval victory over the Japanese in the predawn darkness of July 6 in Kula Gulf—a victory that played an important part in the apparent early doom of the important enemy air base at Munda on New Georgia Island.

That victory prevented large-scale reinforcements from reaching the Japanese, now menaced at Munda on two sides by American invaders.

J. Norman Lodge, Associated Press correspondent in the South Pacific, reported that the Helena sank at least two cruisers and two destroyers before it was sunk. Lodge's reports indicated that the Helena sank one of the destroyers after its own bow had been blown off. (An eyewitness account, however, said the destroyer was hit before the Helena was struck.)

Nine to 11 Japanese warships were sent to the bottom in the battle in the narrow waters between the north end of New Georgia and Kolombangara Island. The Helena was the only American ship lost in the battle and more than 600 of her crew were rescued. Such a warship usually carries 700 to 800 men.

The story of the cruiser's destruction, as related by Alan Jackson, American picture pool photographer who was aboard her, was sent to Australia by Osmar White, Australian correspondent. White estimated the number of survivors rescued at 600.

Jackson, a photographer for International News Photos, gave this account of his experience:

"We were told early in the evening we were going to intercept the Tokyo Express (nickname first applied to Japanese ships supplying Guadalcanal forces and in this case ships above New Georgia Island presumably bringing aid to the menaced Munda air base) and to expect action at midnight.

Two Jap Cruisers Disappear

"I went flying to the bridge. Approximately at 1:30 a. m. (July 6), targets were reported.

"We closed and the whole force opened a terrific salvo. After 6 minutes of continuous firing, two Jap cruisers disappeared.

"We saw a Jap destroyer standing in and fired a salvo at her which hit with a blinding flash. Then something hit us. The order to abandon ship was given. It was pitch dark and everything was covered with oil from the ship's vitals.

"I got my camera and went to the quarterdeck. The sailors were slashing rafts loose and jumping overboard and I went over the side. The water was thickly covered with oil.

"I paddled five minutes and reached a raft on which were 30 other men. There wasn't room for me so I clung on lifelines in the water.

"I looked back and saw the ship like a great ghost against the gun flashes. She was sinking and seemed to be dragging us back. We paddled and rowed madly. One man was crying out, 'come on sailors, give it hell.'

Calls for Help All Around

"We cleared her and she settled quietly and disappeared.

"I heard fellows calling for help all around, but there was little I could do. We sighted another raft and lashed both together. All the while we felt the concussion of shells exploding in the water as the battle continued.

"Someone saw the outline of a ship and rafts started flashing lights all over the place. Then the officer called out 'Douse the lights, they may be Japs.'

"We saw searchlights. We were afraid of going ashore on Kolombangara (island on the Kula Gulf above New Georgia) and paddled seaward. A destroyer's boat passed us, picked up an officer and said it would be back. The men started to shout, 'Hip, hip hooray.' They cheered in unison to attract attention.

"We flashed the lights again. The whole sea was a mass of bobbing, floating lights. A destoyer passed within 50 yards and we called, 'Are you coming back?' Someone replied, 'Take it easy, we will be back.'

"A half hour later, a destroyer came up and we climbed the rope to the deck. She immediately put on speed and started firing. At dawn, we ran into a Jap cruiser and gave her hell. I saw flames and smoke gushing from her. One hero was the whaleboatman who volunteered to stay back and pick up more survivors. We left him."

White said that prior to the battle, planes spotted four cruisers, five destroyers and several supply ships coming down from the north and the American force hit them after they turned into the Kula Gulf, which is only 16 miles long and flanked by dangerous reefs.

War Sidelights

Yanks, Nazis Hold Fire Until Crews Leave Grounded Planes

Hamilton Field, Calif., July 9 (AP).—An American hero fighter pilot, veteran of the African campaign, told today of an unwritten law of combat, under which neither American nor German fliers strafe pilots forced down.

Lieut. Arthur O. Beimdick, jr., told interviewers:

"When an American pilot was shot down and belly landed on the ground, the German would circle him for about five minutes before coming in to strafe his grounded plane. I have seen quite a few of our pilots belly land, and get out of their ships and run like hell.

"There was no place to hide, no holes to jump in, no trees to use for concealment. The German would swoop down and strafe the plane and would never take a shot at the stranded American. We never did it to them, and until it is violated it will probably exist as it is now."

Chutes Machine-Gunned

Cairo, July 9 (AP).—A United States Ninth Air Force communique said today crew members who bailed out of two Liberators of a force which attacked Catania, Sicily, yesterday, "were machine-gunned by enemy fighters."

Invasion Plot Bared

Dublin, July 9 (AP).—The story of a plan, presumably German, to invade Eire in 1940 was told to the Dail, or Parliament, today by Minister of Justice Gerry Bolland in a scorching criticism of the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

"In 1940, when things were looking very bad," he said, "it became known that a parachutist had landed here. He was not captured himself, but in his paraphernalia we found plans which, as far as we could see, were plans for invasion of this country.

"It took up to 18 months to capture that man, and during that time, he was harbored by I. R. A. people."

Bolland said a second parachutist landed, and was captured almost immediately, but asserted: "He escaped and it took us three months to get him, and during that time, he was in touch with the same group of people. Is that no indication of the wish of these people to involve this country in war?"

turned large forces of fighters crossed the Channel at breakfast time for new blows at the continent.

Mitchell bombers, escorted by Spitfires, attacked targets at the big German-held base at St. Omer, France, without loss, the Air Ministry announced. Three Nazi Focke-Wulfs that attempted to intercept the raiders were shot down.

Typhoon fighter-bombers meanwhile attacked Axis shipping off the Cherbourg peninsula while speedy Mustangs damaged a number of locomotives. One Typhoon failed to return.

Cologne was the target of a blistering block-buster attack last Saturday after which unfavorable weather prevented large-scale operations until Thursday night.

Raids on England Renewed

Clearing skies also gave the German air force an opportunity to renew its hit-and-run raids on England.

Nazi-fighter-bombers dropped high explosives on two southeast towns this afternoon, hitting a large movie house in one town, where hundreds of children were watching a cowboy film. Losses were feared to be heavy. One raider was shot down by British defenses.

London had a half-hour raid alert, the first since June 27, and antiaircraft guns on the outskirts of the capital sent up heavy barrages.

Ten Nazi planes carried out the raids, but only a very small number pierced the defense screen around London, dropping a few bombs in the outskirts. Two enemy planes were shot down over London, bringing to three the number lost by the Nazis in their sweep over England.

Rescuers tonight were digging in the ruins of the southeast town's bombed movie house, but hope of recovering any more victims alive was abandoned. It was not announced how many had been rescued and it was expected the full death toll would not be known for several days.

Not as Large as Previous Raids

An Air Ministry statement tonight reported that "the raid on Cologne last night was not as large as the two previous raids, but the bomb load was more than 1000 tons—big enough to do great damage to the industrial district attacked, in which were many factories either previously undamaged or reconstructed after the 1000-bomber raid last summer.

The statement added that "at least two German night fighters were shot down."

Aerial photographs taken at the end of 1942 showed that almost every damaged industrial building in the Rhine River port either had been reconstructed or was in the process of reconstruction. The photos proved that the Germans could not afford to move Cologne's industries to the east.

armies poised about Hitler's European fortress.

In a recent speech to Parliament, Prime Minister Churchill, discussing the May record, said "more than 30 U-boats were certainly destroyed" in that month, and in the last half of May "scarcely a single merchant ship" was sunk in the North Atlantic.

In London, the two governments last night announced a new procedure whereby only approved statements on the U-boat war would be issued on the tenth of each month.

A statement issued at 10 Downing Street said:

"The President of the United States and the Prime Minister of Great Britain have been concerned at the number of statements which are being made from time to time by public persons in the press on both sides of the Atlantic about the anti-U-boat war and methods and devices employed in it.

Enemy Aided

"The enemy, by piecing together portions of these statements, may glean more information than is desirable about these affairs. It has, therefore, been decided that a monthly statement approved by the President and the Prime Minister shall be issued on the tenth of every month and that apart from specially authorized announcements of statements by the President or Prime Minister or duly censored accounts of particular incidents and actions this monthly statement will be the only one to be made on behalf of the British and American governments.

"All departments have been so instructed. It is hoped that the press will go so far as possible and cooperate in keeping the technical discussions of the U-boat warfare within the limits of the official announcements and generally leave the enemy in his present state of doubt and anxiety upon this most important aspect of our successful warfare at sea."

The announcement here said the heavy May toll of U-boats showed its effect in June when main transatlantic convoys were "practically unmolested" and fewer targets were offered to the Allied ships and aircraft searching for the Axis submersibles.

The British-American communique here was released by the Office of War Information.

The text of the announcement:

"1. In June the losses of Allied and neutral merchant ships from submarine attacks were the lowest since the United States of America entered the war. The losses from all forms of enemy action were the second lowest recorded since the war between Britain and Germany began.

Fewer U-Boat Targets

"2. The number of targets offered to antisubmarine vessels and aircraft of the United Nations was not as great in June as previously, but the sinkings of Axis submarines were substantial and satisfactory.

"3. The heavy toll taken of the U-boats in May showed its effect in June in that the main transatlantic convoys were practically unmolested, and the U-boat attacks on our shipping were in widely separated areas. However, every opportunity was taken of attacking U-boats leaving and returning to their bases on the west coast of France.

"4. The merchant shipping tonnage of the United Nations has shown a large net increase every month this year. Antisubmarine vessels and aircraft are coming into service in considerable numbers."

Are They in Home Waters?

Although there is no doubt the Allies have made substantial progress in the battle against the U-boats, there has been varied speculation as to just how hard the enemy has been hit. Naval men have emphasized that owing to the stealthy character of U-boat operations it is never possible to be sure that submarines have been licked.

One suggestion, on the speculative side, has been that Hitler has called his submarines back to home waters to guard the invasion coasts.

Marines Used New Tactics To Take Viru

By Walter Farr
London Daily Mail War Correspondent (Distributed by International News Service)

With Advanced American Forces On New Georgia, July 8 (Delayed). One by one, Japanese island bases are falling and their Japanese garrisons are being completely wiped out by sudden, bold American thrusts

The essence of the fighting here, as it now is developing, is the use of small, highly-trained units carrying tremendous fire power and with the ability to move across uncharted territory, camp out in the open and yet avoid dangerous tropical diseases.

Here is a record of the land fighting, giving a close-up of the American marine in action on New Georgia:

First day: Orders are given in advance on the best possible way to rush the garrison at Viru. So enemy scouts cannot hear the movements of troops in motor-driven boats, the marines, in small heavily-armed units, leave port and paddle themselves in small, silently moving rubber boats and native war canoes.

Go Between Patrols

Under cover of tropical rain squalls, they creep along the enemy-held coastline, only a few feet away, to make a landing at a gap between Jap patrols at a village called Regi Place, known only to natives.

A few hours later:

After the Marines leave Regi Place, a strong Jap force moves in, believing the Marines still there, and drenches the entire area with machinegun fire.

Second day: Native scouts lead us into the jungle undergrowth toward Viru. A Jap force attacks our rear guard. In a savage bout of firing four Japs are killed. Five Americans are cut off from our party.

Owing to the swamp we are able to advance only about 7 miles in 12 hours.

Third day: I am astonished how the Marines can drag big guns, ammunition, radio equipment through these terrible trails. We camp beside the River Mohle. The drenching, tropical rain permits no sleep.

Column Split Up

Fourth day: the enemy is still following us. The hills get higher and higher. The column, as it winds through the jungle, gets split up.

A lieutenant just led a platoon in a gallant charge. He captured a hill and killed 18 Japs.

Fifth day: Sergt. Zwick, a veteran of Pearl Harbor, leads the advance party. Suddenly he finds himself within a few feet of a Jap gun muzzle.

Services Face Criticism on Plane Output

By the Associated Press

A formal report criticizing the Nation's military forces for permitting continued production of planes they consider obsolete will be issued this weekend by the Truman War Investigating Committee. That was the prediction yesterday of D. C. Speaker, mythical Capital observer who represents authentic but unquotable sources.

Speaker said the report lashes at what it terms failure of the military men to reduce the number—said to be 60—of various types of fighting, transport and trainer planes now under construction.

In addition, Speaker said the report charges that one of the largest aviation manufacturing companies handling military contracts has "spread management too thin," with inefficient production of warplanes as a result.

"The committee findings also will deal with a subcommittee's investigation of reports that defective parts have gone into some aircraft engines being manufactured for the armed forces," Speaker said.

Covering a wide inquiry into manufacturing, inspection and record-keeping activities in the aviation industry, Speaker said he had learned that the report was strongly critical of some of the policies of the military forces.

"Because of this fact, I understand that Lieut. Gen. William S. Knudsen, the Army's production trouble-shooter, argued at a closed session yesterday that the language of its conclusions was too severe, Speaker said, adding that the committee declined to alter its findings despite Knudsen's protests.

In connection with its demand for a reduction in the number of types of planes now on the production line, Speaker asserted that the committee criticized a decision to continue construction of certain fighters it believes should give way to newer types.

(Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of the Army Air Forces, recently told the Senate Appropriations Committee that the Army had decided to concentrate on four models of fighters, instead of the six previously in mass production, and was constantly improving the performance of its planes. Since then there have been announcements that new types of super-fighters are in production, without any disclosure of the performance of these ships.)

bombing made thus far against Munda—a base which has been pounded so repeatedly from the air that it has been of little service to the enemy in recent weeks.

Targets to North Also Hit

The raiders encountered some ack ack, but received protection against any possible Japanese interception from accompanying Wildcat fighters. No Japanese plane showed up, however.

The artillery shelling came from Rendova Island, which is about 5 miles across water from Munda. The shells were aimed at anti-aircraft positions.

Meanwhile, other dive-bombers roared down on targets at Bairoko and Enogai inlet, to the north of Munda.

Because our infantrymen are in a virtual wilderness west of Zanana and south of Rice Anchorage on New Georgia, reports of operations on the ground are difficult to obtain, but there appeared to be no slackening of patrol activity.

Latest reports said there was no material change in positions from yesterday, which means our troops still are moving near Elelo, only 3 miles east of Munda, and working southwest from Rice Anchorage at a point south of Enogai.

Over Rendova Island our fighter planes destroyed 4 of the 45 enemy planes seeking to raid American positions.

Allies Launch Drive on Sicily

Canadian troops took part in the landings. There had been no prior indication that Canadians were in North Africa from where the Allied troops undoubtedly embarked. It was believed that they may have been Commando units such as participated in the Dieppe raid.

Sicily's 10,000 square miles are believed to be garrisoned by nine or 10 Italian divisions and two or three German divisions, plus supporting units said to be on the island.

The rugged, mountainous island has some 18 to 20 main airfields, which have been under constant Allied bombardment for weeks. In addition, there are perhaps four fields on the toe of Italy within easy fighter plane range of Sicily.

Most of the southern and eastern coasts of the island are within easy fighter plane range of Allied bases at Malta and Pantelleria, and virtually all of Sicily can be reached by our fighters.

The best sections of the Italian island's 1722 miles of coastline for amphibious landings are along the southern and eastern coasts. Some of the primary objectives, however, such as Palermo and Messina, are in the northern part of the island.

The important harbors of Trapani and Marsala, on the western tip of Sicily, would be difficult on direct attack. But if the Aegedean Islands, just off both ports, were captured first, airfields there would simply an invasion here.

would be "good news" to the Axis.

As favorably reported, the Fulbright resolution puts Congress on record for "the creation of appropriate international machinery with power adequate to establish and maintain a just and lasting peace, among the nations of the world, and as favoring United States participation therein."

Committee interventionists as well as some former extreme isolationists on the committee enthusiastically indorsed it. For Republicans it offered an opportunity to get off the "isolationist" spot and to the Administration this or similar language offered hope of cooperative postwar action by both parties. House action had been scheduled before the recess, but leaders decided to let it go over after some Republican supporters asked time to consolidate their own lines.

Unless both parties "get on the same side of the fence" by some such commitment, one congressional leader said yesterday that "isolationism" is certain to be an issue in 1944 congressional campaigns, if not in the presidential race.

Reds Hurl Back Fresh Waves of Nazis

ties" and the Red air force emerged without loss of any aircraft for the second night in succession.

In the Belgorod sector, 2000 Germans were killed during the day; in a nearby action 1000 more fell. But it was in the Kursk-Orel sector where the supreme Nazi efforts were being made.

The Germans themselves, in a long broadcast propaganda report, spoke of "ferocious fighting, south of Orel where Nazi troops "could gain ground only inch by inch."

Further German advances—these, too, without confirmation—were reported about Belgorod.

This German propaganda report put total Russian tank losses at more than 1100 and Soviet plane losses at 1000.

Russian dispatches said that six Nazi divisions were lunging at a narrow sector south of Orel, but that "the Hitlerites failed to achieve success." Three of the attacking divisions were infantry; three were tanks.

The Germans agreed with Russian accounts that the five-day struggle was growing in intensity, and both sides employed masses of reserves.

The focal point of fighting shifted to south of Orel, Tass news agency said.

Slightly inside the Russian lines, the famous 50-ton Klim Voroshilov tanks were slugging it out with the 60-ton German Tigers. Russian dispatches pictured the Belgorod situation as in hand, despite some minor German penetrations in four days.

Red Star, the Russian army newspaper, said: "The enemy experiences great strain in the Belgorod area owing to heavy losses he has suffered. However, the Germans replenish their losses in equipment and manpower and try to increase the weight of their strength. They are bringing into play fresh tanks, infantry and aviation reserves."

The German communique, broadcast by Berlin and recorded by the Associated Press, said:

"The big struggle in the Belgorod-Orel area goes on with undiminished ferocity. Since day before yesterday, a gigantic tank battle has been raging in the rear of pierced Soviet positions in which the Soviets are making every attempt to check our tempestous advancing armored spearheads."

Transocean, the Nazi propaganda agency, amplified this later to say the Germans had widened a break in the deeply echeloned Soviet defense system in "the battle of Kursk," but gave no location.

"German infantry at present is overcoming resistance of the last Soviet defenses in this sector," a military correspondent reported over the Berlin radio. "Both sides are turning the battle of Kursk into the greatest battle of attrition of the whole war."

The report claimed the Germans had advanced 36 miles north from Belgorod in the direction of Kursk and were widening their breach toward Novy Oskol.

The Germans asserted the tanks knocked out included scores of American Grant and Lee models, but not the General Shermans, which they met with regret in North Africa.

While at no point along the 165-mile active front was there a lull, it was at Orel that Nazi Marshal Guenther von Kluge persisted in hurling battering rams of steel at narrow sectors in hopes of a major breakthrough.

Red Star pointed up the violence of battle at the northern end of the bulge by saying certain Soviet formations held their lines against 13 successive attacks of German tanks, allowing not a one to pass through.

The army newspaper described how the Germans attacked. The spearheads frequently comprised 20 to 30 Tiger tanks, followed by 40 to 60 self-propelled cannon. Then followed the infantry with older model Mark-III and Mark-IV tanks protecting their flanks. The Russians parried these thrusts mainly with stationary cannon, although Col. Gen. Filip Golikov was sending increasing numbers of mechanized forces into the fray.

At the Belgorod end of the 7500-square-mile bulge in the flat, Kursk steppe, the Russians said they were countering German tactics with "fire bags." The heads of the battering-ram columns were allowed to penetrate their lines, they said, and then were subjected to concentric fire of tank-busters, mortars, and cannon within the fire bag. One unit was said to have wrecked 74 tanks in two days; another burned 20 Tigers in a single engagement, Moscow reported.

'43 Crops to Yield 10% Less Than '42

Famine Continues

High Price Lure, Rains Delay Beef

By Linton Burkett
Post Staff Writer

The rains came to the Western plains and dampened hopes of Easterners for an end to the current famine in beef, officials of the Weather Bureau and War Foods Administration said yesterday.

The seasonal arid spell in Texas, Arizona and New Mexico was drying up the lush grazing lands and as a consequence ranchers were about to be faced with the necessity of moving cattle to market before pasture lands became entirely sere.

In addition the ranchers have produced 30 per cent more cattle this year than last, which added to the drain on grazing lands.

But within the last two weeks there have been ample rains to revive the parched land, officials said. Following a good soaking the grass revives quickly and Government reports fail to indicate any heavy movement of cattle to market.

Beef hungry stomachs in the East, however, could indulge in a few anticipatory twitches as War Food Administration officials reported the ranchers were expected to start moving their cattle towards the dinner tables, via the slaughter houses, in conformity with the usual summer practice.

Dry, or drought, conditions in the cattle raising country are normal for this time of the year and cattlemen customarily try to lighten the load on their grazing lands by selling off portions of the fattened cows.

However, as a result of uncertainty as to prices the movement this year has dwindled almost to the vanishing point which has resulted in the present meat famine.

Food Administration officials held out slight hope of any deluge of beef, however, as they said ranges, under normal conditions, could support the estimated 30 per cent increase in cattle.

Planted Acreage Largest in Eleven Years, Report Says

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

Although farmers have planted crops on the largest acreage in 11 years, their production in 1943 will run only 8 per cent above the yield averaged for 1937-41 and will be almost 10 per cent below the "miracle harvest" of 1942, the Department of Agriculture reported yesterday in its first general round-up survey since planting got fully under way.

This estimate is on the optimistic side and can be revised downward if weather conditions go below normal in July and August, department officials warned.

War Food Administrator Marvin Jones said that while the farmer is meeting the high acreage goals set last winter there is "no reason for any belief that we are out of the woods" as far as the Nation's food prospects are concerned.

Considerably Less Corn

Highlights in the report showed:

1. Corn, needed in great quantities for the production of beef, pork, milk, and poultry products, will fall considerably below last year's heights, but will produce above the yields of other years since 1932. A harvest of 2,707,000,000 bushels is predicted from planting that covers five million more acres than last year.

2. Aggregate tonnage of the four feed grains—corn, oats, barley and sorghum—will be only one million tons above the usual peacetime production, although the Nation is supporting the largest livestock population on record.

3. Wheat yields probably will run to 791 million bushels, which would be only slightly below average production — excluding the drought years—but far below the 1942 and 1941 crops of 981 million and 943 million bushels, respectively.

4. Bumper crops of dry beans, peanuts, flaxseed, rice, potatoes, and sugar cane are to be expected and near-record crops of hay, soy beans, and barley "seem probable."

This is due to large increases in acreages, however, and not to yields per acre. In only "nine scattered States" are current crop conditions equal to the prospects this time last year.

Deciduous Fruits

5. Prospects for seven of the major deciduous fruits—peaches, pears, grapes, cherries, plums, prunes and apricots—promise a production of 6 per cent below the 10-year average from 1932 through 1941. Among these seven, grapes will have the largest comparative harvest.

6. Commercial truck crops for the fresh market in 1943 will be about 11 per cent less than in 1942, but about 10 per cent above average years.

7. Snap beans, carrots and tomatoes are the only truck crops showing material increase this year over last.

Cotton Acreage Lower

8. The sweet potato crop promises to be the second largest on record, due both to increased planting and better than average growing conditions to July 1.

9. The cotton acreage shows a drop of 5.4 per cent under last year and is the smallest in more than 40 years. However, the "crop is mostly well cultivated and appears to have had a favorable start."

10. The tobacco crop "shows prospects" for being about 1,400,000,000 pounds—or about average.

U. S. Urges Canning Of Tomato Juice

Putting up tomato juice is one of the simplest of the canning processes, the Department of Agriculture told victory gardeners yesterday in a go-ahead-and-try-plea designed to forestall waste of home-grown food.

No pressure cooker is needed and the department will furnish a free recipe, it was declared. Tomato juice, prospective canners were told, fits into an infants diet beautifully, means more blue ration coupons for store foods, and is a grand idea generally.

Fighter-Bomber Proves Its Worth

An Advanced Air Base in North Africa, July 9 (AP).—The North American A-36—a fast fighter-bomber developed from the P-51 Mustang fighter—was disclosed today to have been in action in the Mediterranean theater and was used against Sicily yesterday.

The official reports said the A-36, which is equipped with brakes, permitting its use as a dive bomber as well as a glide bomber, described it as "fundamentally a fighter but able to defend itself effectively during bombing and strafing missions."

agencies. Finally, said Cox, if the committee "finds itself too seriously handicapped it will refer the matter back to the House for action.' Under present plans the House will not meet till September 14.

Officers Can't Appear

Patterson's letter said in part:

"The President directs that the committee be informed that he, the President, refuses to allow the documents to be delivered to the committee as contrary to the public interests. For the same reason, I am unable to permit the witnesses (a number of officers) to appear."

Forrestal said the same thing in almost the same words, and so did Budget Director Smith, both in a letter and under oath on the witness stand.

The committee ran into equally adamant silence on another topic when it called to the stand officials of the Federal Communications Commission—Chairman James Lawrence Fly and General Counsel Charles R. Denny, jr.

Each in turn refused to testify, they said, by a directive of the Board of War Communications of which Fly is chairman, and Denny is law committee chairman, about a BWC hearing which Committee Counsel Eugene L. Carey said involved Neville Miller, head of the National Association of Broadcasters.

Allegedly Broke Confidence

Garey said the complaint against Miller had been that he broke the confidence of a BWC committee of which he was a member and made public certain matters relating to his opposition to draft deferments and other questions. Garey suggested that the complaint had been made in "reprisal" for Miller's opposition to actions of Fly as head of the FCC, but Fly formally denied that he had made any complaint against Miller.

Cox and Fly, long at war with each other, continued their battle through the hearing. The FCC has sought removal of Cox as chairman of the committee. An issue between them was FCC disclosure that Cox had received a check for $2500 from a Georgia radio station which had a case before the agency. Cox said the money went to charity.

Committee "No Sounding Board"

At one point, Fly said that he wanted to make a statement "on my own," stressing the "importance of preserving the secrecy of documents" branded confidential by the military.

"The committee wants to accord you every courtesy," flashed Cox, "but you can't make this committee a sounding board. You have your own facilities for broadcasting your views, and you use them."

Fly continued that he would be derelict in his duty not to inform the committee that he had in his pocket a "confidential" document from the Joint Chiefs of Staff which "completely refutes" the charges of last week, that FCC's intelligence division had endangered the security of military information.

"I Think You're Wrong"

As one lawyer to another, Fly and Garey hit at each other over the question of whether the BWC directive that kept Fly from testifying had any weight in law.

"As a lawyer, you know the boards' directive has no standing in law against the process of this committee," said Garey.

"Do you want my legal opinion?" asked Fly.

"Yes, I've heard a lot about them, I'd like to hear one," Garey said.

"I think you're wrong," Fly said.

"If I had any doubts before, now I'm sure I'm right," said Garey.

Fly said he was relying on the findings of the BWC that for him to tell about the Neville Miller hearing would "adversely affect the national security and injure the national prestige," and also that the Cox committee's power to investigate the FCC did not extend to the BWC.

Garey told the committee that one of the officers barred from testifying, Rear Admiral Stanford C. Hooper, former director of Naval Communications, had prepared a report on the desirability of transferring FCC's intelligence functions to the military, and that the report, containing sensational statements, would be made public later.

On the question of whether they would give the information wanted by the committee in executive session, Smith said he would have to seek again advice of counsel, and Fly said he would continue to follow the directive of the BWC.

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt declined to tell his press conference why George Henry Payne, one of three Republican FCC members had been renominated to a seven-year term on June 30, and the nomination taken back July 1. He said he had seen various guesses about the matter, all wrong, and that he did not think he would supply the right one.

4 Nazi Planes Hide Beside Portuguese Ships in Attack

Lisbon, July 9 (AP).—Newspaper dispatches from Sines, 60 miles south of Lisbon, reported that four large German seaplanes took refuge beside several Portuguese fishing trawlers today when attacked by three Allied fighters.

The correspondent said the air battle was watched by hundreds of villagers and fishermen who saw the Germans jettison their bombs and alight beside the ships. The fighters, realizing they could not continue the attack without injuring the fishermen, broke off the battle.

The German bombers were reported to be badly damaged and some of their crews killed and wounded, but they took off again when the fighters disappeared.

now were convinced of their innocence.

The body of the 68-year-old American-born Oakes was discovered by H. G. Christie, prominent Bahamian landowner and sportsman, who was a house guest of Sir Harry at Westbourne, the multi-millionaire's Nassau estate.

The Duke and Duchess of Windsor occupied the 15-bedroom home two years ago while Government House was being renovated.

A coroner's inquest, held in secret, was adjourned until next Tuesday.

The Duke of Windsor, governor of the Bahamas, called in Melchen and Barker to help solve the case. He took a personal interest in the investigation, and visited the police officers this afternoon to see how it was going.

De Marigny came to Nassau several years ago with the Marquis Georges Devisdelou Guimbeau, also of Mauritius.

It was known at Nassau that Sir Harry opposed his daughter's marriage to De Marigny, who is about 35 years old.

Oakes had been in good health and continued to play tennis and lead an active social life. He had postponed a trip to the United States in the expectation of showing his new project, a 1000-acre sheep ranch, to Nassau newspapermen yesterday.

Nassau planned to pay its last respects at memorial services in the Anglican Cathedral, although a date was not set immediately.

Born in Maine, Oakes studied mining engineering at Bowdoin College. After his graduation he long searched unsuccessfully for gold, but finally struck it rich in Canada. Oakes became a British citizen in 1915 while he was living in Canada. His wife is now in Maine.

Oakes' Nephew Here

Lieut. Comdr. George Babson of 3408 O Street, a nephew of Sir Harry Oakes, said last night that Lady Oakes, who is in Bar Harbor, Me., had not been informed of the arrest of her son-in-law because she had suffered a collapse on receiving the news of her husband's death.

With Lady Oakes is Mrs. Paul Ellis of Leesburg, Va., mother of Commander Babson and sister of Sir Harry. Mrs. Ellis was informed of the arrest.

Commander Babson said Alfred de Marigny and Miss Nancy Oakes were married in New York in May, 1942. He added that he had not seen De Marigny and was unable to attend the wedding because of his duties with the Navy.

The officer is on duty here with the Bureau of Ordnance and has been in the Navy for two years.

pay of some members of the Detective Bureau, the administrative office and the Traffic Division, the balance of the funds on hand can be handed out to the remainder of the force.

For the $100,000 fire department payroll, only $96,000 was on hand. To make up the difference, the salaries of some 40 employes, mostly in the fire marshal's office, the repair shop and the administrative office, will be withheld.

The several thousands of other District employes who still must figure how to keep the wolf from the door without any ammunition were told that if the deficiency bill was not signed by the end of next week, at least the pay checks for the first half of July salaries, covered in the safely signed 1943-44 appropriation bill, would be coming through on Saturday.

Asked why no steps to get money for the impoverished employes had been taken before, the Commissioners referred to the pay-as-you-go act of 1922 forbidding the District to borrow any money whatsoever. In the cases when the District has borrowed money—such as in the blackout funds or the Capper-Cramton funds for recreational development—special legislation had to be put through to permit the loan. It did not seem feasible to try to beat the delay on one stilled bit of legislation by attempting more legislation, they said.

Furthermore, it was explained, the Commissioners hoped from hour to hour to hear that the deficiency bill had been signed, thereby releasing the entire amount for the June salaries.

dition would be brought home to most legislators as they return to home districts during the recess, and that Congress might be more receptive to limited food subsidies this fall.

Neither the House nor Senate Banking Committees, meanwhile, had made any plans for recess study of the explosive subsidy question. Ranking members of both groups said they probably would meet for another look at the program immediately after the recess. Further legislation is certain, since the life of the Commodity Credit Corp. was extended for only six months.

Roosevelt Signs Bill To Defer Students

Deferment from the draft for 18- and 19-year-old students called in the last half of their academic year was provided yesterday in a bill signed by President Roosevelt.

Under the measure however, the deferment would be continued only if the student maintains "satisfactory" grades.

WAAC To WAC

On their posts throughout the country the WAACS are now singing, "We're in the Army now." The fact that the male personnel of the Regular Army, both officers and enlisted men, have been the first to congratulate them upon their coming of age, distinctly underlines their very real achievements. For it was the Army which, after accepting women volunteers with a high degree of skepticism and some prejudice, pressed for their change of status and urged that they be elevated from auxiliaries to a Women's Army Corps.

The life history of the WAACS reads like the proverbial American success story. At their inception they were offered a chance to make good at only a handful of noncombatant jobs then considered suitable for women. Within a little more than a year they had proved themselves so effective that the Army now urgently asks that their ranks be increased to 600,000 One hundred and forty-two jobs ranging all the way from stenography and cooking to the maintenance of airplanes and radio mechanics are now open to them. In the Signal Corps at Stockton Field they have been charged with the responsibility of maintaining communications with such remote points in our line of defense as India, thereby releasing trained soldiers for active duty. At Aberdeen Proving Ground they have shown themselves capable of doing highly technical work in the Ballistic Research Laboratory which was formerly thought impossible for women. In the Link Trainer Department of the Army Air Forces they are being trained as instructors.

The plumbing of the capabilities of the WAACS, indeed, has yielded rich results. On top of this revelation it has been observed that the WAAC basic training course develops the women's physical stamina and endurance to a point well beyond that of civilian women in industry. Thus the metamorphosis from WAAC to WAC has been well earned. It brings substantial financial benefits, it increases their military noncombatant utilization, it lends them authority and greatly increases their prestige and morale. The change in nomenclature in itself is no mean contribution to this enhanced prestige. Director Hobby is now a full colonel, and her field directors are now majors. But since the WAACS will soon be serving in the Army and not with the Army, and because Colonel Hobby commands a corps numbering 65,000, or more than a brigade, why not promote her to brigadier general?

Aircraft Carriers

Just how many aircraft carriers we now have riding the waves is, sensibly enough, one of the Navy's secrets. We have been encouraged to think, however, that quite a number of them, mostly of fairly small size, have been launched from our shipyards in recent months. We might have had a greater carrier fleet, to be sure, if our blue-water admirals had not insisted in the early months of the war that our available supplies of steel and manpower be allocated to the salvaging of Pearl Harbor battleships.

The aircraft carrier is essentially an offensive weapon. It is capable of transporting a flock of planes over long distances and then launching them to strike a blow against the enemy at a selected point. But our carriers have not been used offensively on any major scale. It is true that some of the small auxiliaries have done effective work against U-boats in the North Atlantic. And bigger carriers have played an important role in Pacific sea engagements—which so far have been essentially of a defensive nature. The Navy has not yet, however, developed a strategic carrier-based air force, comparable to the strategic air force of the Army, to seek out the sources of the enemy's strength and destroy them.

Cannot the mainland of Japan be attacked by a strong force of carrier planes? We ask the question innocently, as laymen, acknowledging that there are obvious difficulties and dangers in the way. But the Navy has never been averse to danger. And, as Admiral King himself observed, war can be waged effectively only through the taking of "calculated risks." If our carriers could be massed in sufficient strength, they would be capable of providing their own fighter protection against Japanese land-based planes while launching bombers to shower destruction on Tokyo and Nagasaki.

Perhaps the primary barrier to such an assault is the reluctance of our "battleship men" to accept the airplane as their major offensive weapon. Their training and their hopes have been invested in surface ships. Planes, to their way of thinking, are no more than auxiliary devices to protect the battlewagons. It may well be that naval aviation will realize its full potentialities only when it comes under the command of men who see the surface fleet simply as a means of conveyance and look upon planes as their principal striking force.

Looking Back

The record of the Seventy-eighth Congress during the past six months provides irrefutable evidence that the legislative branch of the Government has at last emancipated itself from executive domination. To be sure, requests for huge sums of money to finance the war were voted without demur, and there was likewise little opposition to renewal of the President's lend-lease authority. However, smooth going for essential war measures afforded no test of the temper of Congress toward the Administration, but rather signified its eagerness to speed the war effort. As a matter of fact, some members of Congress expressed uneasiness over the lack of critical scrutiny of Army and Navy supply bills. They suggested the need of expert advice to enable House and Senate appropriation committees to do some effective pruning of such bills. We may expect, therefore, that when Congress reassembles it will show an increasing disposition to assert its legislative rights in respect of matters strictly military and naval.

During the past session it was the record on domestic issues that showed the extent of congressional disaffection toward the President. Repeatedly Congress defeated, blocked or modified Administration plans for dealing with urgent problems on the home front. The climax came when it passed the Smith-Connally antistrike bill over the President's veto. But this supreme assertion of independence was preceded and followed by other acts of omission and commission plainly significant of the loss of executive control over Congress. When Congress has gone along with the Administration, it has done so because it desired to do so, not because of orders from above. That is evident from the action taken in respect to the pay-as-you-go tax legislation. This struggle was prolonged and bitter, but the final outcome was a compromise leaning toward the Ruml plan, which the Treasury had consistently fought.

Congress also pronounced the death sentence on a number of New Deal agencies, notably the National Resources Planning Board and the NYA. It invalidated the presidential order limiting salaries to $25,000 net, and ignored a request for new taxes to raise additional billions of dollars. More spectacular and possibly as momentous as the struggle over antistrike legislation was the end-of-the-session subsidy controversy. The inconclusive compromise which temporarily terminated that dispute wrote a weak finis to a session that on the whole was on the constructive side. The gravest omission was the lack of an adequate tax program which derived in part from the prolonged wrangling over the Ruml plan.

Most of the defeats suffered by the Administration during the past session were in our opinion well deserved and should be put on the credit side of the congressional account. But there is a debit side to the record that gives rise to considerable misgiving about the future. Repeatedly the Administration has been thwarted by a coalition of disaffected Democrats and Republicans many of whom seem more bent on scoring against the President than on finding the best solution of controversial issues. Moreover, a disproportionate amount of time has been devoted to vicious sniping and snapping at certain executive agencies and at a few individuals in Government employ. There has also been inadequate understanding on the part of Congress of some of the major questions before it, such as the subsidy issue. The character of the debates over the rollback subsidy program both before and after the President's veto were a direct consequence of a confused state of the legislative mind as well as legislative willingness to make a political issue of an economic question that should be considered at this crucial posture in our affairs with extreme objectivity.

The emergence of Congress as an independent body capable of making its own decisions is a welcome development after so many years of tame submission to executive domination. But the assertion of such independence in wartime surely carries with it an obligation to avoid purely obstructionist tactics. Congress can be said to be doing its war duty only by discriminating cooperation with the executive branch of Government. Opposition simply for the sake of scoring a political advantage is against the public interest and destructive of the unity essential to effective prosecution of the war. Unfortunately there is some danger that Congress may be headed in that direction. We hope that the Legislature will use the recess as an opportunity to ponder the implications of such a course of action. To win this war and to win the peace after it, this Nation must be one and indivisible.

Exit Robert?

According to information which, we are told, comes piping hot off the griddle, Admiral Georges Robert is at long last about to relinquish his post as Governor of the Antilles and thus permit the installation of a pro-Allied administration at Martinique. This time, we hope, the news is true. But in view of what has happened in the past, we'll keep our fingers crossed until Robert actually leaves Fort de France. For the egregious admiral has proved himself a slick and slippery customer who has capitalized both his own stubbornness and our patience.

Robert has managed to outwit—and outwait—all those who for three years have been trying to get rid of him. During all that time he has clung to his seemingly precarious perch in spite of mounting internal discontent and rising external pressure. Not even the cutting off of food shipments to Martinique caused any relaxation. Appeals of the Giraudists and the De Gaullists left him cold. And in retrospect it is a reasonable assumption that the long negotiations he held with American representatives were merely a delaying action on the part of the adroit admiral.

To be sure, since the Allied liberation of North and West Africa, the presence in the Caribbean of the bankrupt and senescent Vichy regime has been more of a nuisance than a danger. Nonetheless it is high time Robert got his come-uppance and the people of Martinique were freed of their Vichy incubus. The curtain on that comedy has stayed up far too long already.

Cracking Munda

When our forces made a successful landing on Rendova Island and Viru Harbor in the New Georgia group of the central Solomons, they put their foot on another rung of the long and difficult ladder leading to Rabaul, Truk and ultimately, Tokyo. Rendova is 200 miles closer to Rabaul than is Guadalcanal. But the immediate objective of our drive is not Rabaul but Munda, on the southwestern tip of New Georgia Island. There the Japanese have built an important air base, one of many in the central Solomons. Munda is accessible to Rabaul by sea as well as by air.

In view of the importance to them of Rabaul, their principal base in the southwest Pacific, a sizable Japanese naval force was sent to reinforce Munda. Intercepted in the Kula Gulf, this Japanese force was apparently smashed. We lost a cruiser and a destroyer. According to the Navy's communique, six of the enemy warships were probably sunk and four damaged. The Japanese may return. But in view of their disproportionately heavy losses, they may leave Munda to its fate.

The garrison at Munda can be supplied to some extent by fast-moving vessels operating at night via Bairoko Harbor, to the north of Munda. But if we secure effective control of the Kula Gulf, as now seems probable, Munda should prove not too difficult a nut to crack, regardless of the dribble of supplies that may continue to reach it. How long it will take to do so remains to be seen. The indications are that Munda will not prove another Guadalcanal, rather another Attu. As our force increases we should be able to hasten our pace.

Action And Reaction

The flat and insolent refusal of Mr. J. Caesar Petrillo to alter or amend his prohibition of the use under any circumstances of transcriptions in radio has already produced an interesting repercussion. Representative Hoffman of Michigan sends us a copy of a bill directed against Mr. Petrillo which he introduced nearly a year ago and which, evidently, he has now some hope of reviving.

This bill, known as H. R. 7441, would make punishable by imprisonment up to five years and by fine up to $5000 any attempt by any person, or firm, or corporation, or association or group directly or indirectly to interfere in any way with any musical or other radio program which is broadcast beyond any interstate boundary. (The italics are ours.)

This bill in its present form strikes us as utterly sweeping and arbitrary. It seems to us that, read literally and waiving the question of constitutionality, it would not only prevent Mr. Petrillo from stopping the use of transcriptions but would also prevent his musicians from striking in support of any legitimate grievances they might have in future. It might even hamstring the Federal Communications Commission, since any form of regulation might be construed as interference. Indeed, as far as language goes, it is an open point whether "direct or indirect" interference might not apply to any speaker or artist who might seek to cancel a radio engagement or possibly to any householder who might attempt to shut out a homily on the evils of constipation or the virtues of laundry soap, since such actions would in a way interfere with the "dissemination or movement" of a program.

The point is, however, that even if it means all these things, Representative Hoffman's bill is not one whit more absurd and arbitrary than Mr. Petrillo's edict against transcriptions "at any cost or at any price." It is another illustration of how one evil tends to breed an opposite of precisely equal magnitude. Moreover, it is possible, even easy, to conceive a national wave of reaction against tin-pot labor tyrants in which it would be possible for such legislation to be enacted and perhaps even upheld by the courts. This we suggest is something for members of labor organizations, and especially those of Mr. Petrillo's own union, to think about very carefully.

THE LAKE

These would I keep were all the rest forgotte...:
Bright waves and rushes tall,
The drying cat-tails' sudden rusty cotton,
The calm air shattered by a strange loon call.

The lake at twilight, all the lilies closing,
The sun's imperious red,
The bubble-noted wrens at home and dozing,
The heart so surely, queerly comforted

By moonlight with a silver harp glissando—
While, from the sunken logs,
There rang the chant of that concealed commando,
The dauntless, the eternal-drumming frogs!

VIRGINIA SCOTT MINER

Good Neighbors

By Virginia Prewett

Argentine Paradox

OBSERVERS WITH eyes on the New World's watched pot in Argentina see a curious spectacle there as the new regime goes into its second month. The new government's record to date is so contradictory that only one conclusion is possible: They are attempting a gigantic straddle.

New proof that Argentina's new leaders are, to put it mildly, confused about the relation of words to acts came Monday when the New World was celebrating our Independence Day.

July Fourth this year was marked by our sister republics with more expressions and acts of friendship than ever before in history. And Argentina's new Foreign Minister Storni in a speech to the American colony in Buenos Aires Monday made fullest pledges of friendship and cooperation.

"Argentina will go with the American nations wherever she is called," he said. "Combining the effort of all New World groups . . is necessary to win the American victory."

Yet before night the Argentine government banned a mass meeting to celebrate our Independence Day.

New Government

The new government has gone even further in contradicting apparent friendliness. It came in with a promise to do something positive about hemisphere obligations. The best they could have done would have been to break the diplomatic relations that are permitting the Axis to use their country as espionage base in the New World. Next best was breaking the radio and wireless communications with the Axis that these spies use. The new regime did this and progovernment comment hailed it enthusiastically as their "positive act."

Unfortunately for this gesture, the Ramirez regime let the Axis resume telecommunications for a few days after the first ban. The effect was to give Axis agents a chance to make arrangements by wireless and cable to get their information to European headquarters through neutral or other channels.

Along with this, the new regime briefly banned one of Buenos Aires leading English newspapers for an editorial criticizing Nazi higher-ups that was published months ago. Furthermore, they have put a stop to the activities of the Junta de la Victoria, an Argentine Woman's organization friendly to the United States.

On the other hand, Americans in Buenos Aires, who knew that Axis representatives burned their papers and got ready for the clampdown when the revolt was in progress, now see them doing business at the old stand just as if nothing had happened.

However much we in the United States might want to ignore all this in the interests of patience and harmony, it is being made impossible for us to do so. The Castillo regime, bad as it was, managed things with more finesse. The question that arises from them is, what can the new regime possibly hope to gain by this policy?

If the Argentine army, anxious to get lease-lend equipment, is really doing the thinking for the new regime, they are certainly going about it in the wrong way. Even if we wanted to give lease-lend aid to a regime with such a contradictory record, we have allies in this war. Both Brazil and Mexico are getting ready to send troops abroad to fight. It can be taken for granted that they will want all the equipment that can be spared from forces now in the field. How the Argentine army could expect to get any sort of supplies from us while running an openly uncooperative government is beyond understanding.

So far there have been only two clues that make sense out of the Argentine situation and they do not add up to army control within the new government.

The new regime has lifted the limits set on farm production and almost doubled the amount of government money available for loans to float the agricultural surpluses that are certain to result. Argentina has been burning cereal products for years. When you remember that Argentine conservatism represents the big landowners, the picture clears. With the lid off crop support and crop planting, they stand to prosper exceedingly, no matter what happens to the nation's finances.

Second Clue

The second clue comes from the new Argentine plan to send economic missions to other New World republics. From this it looks as if Argentina's old-line conservative and isolationist industrialists are planning to get in on the ground-floor of hemisphere markets while other nations are busy manufacturing for war.

In spite of all that has been said, the acts of the new regime favor this combination of agricultural-industrial conservatives and them alone.

Months ago this writer pointed out that the Argentine people are powerless and that a real change in the situation would have to come from within the group at the top. This is still true. As the situation stands today, only army realization that they are being led up a blind alley against their own interests could bring about a change.

De Gaulle As Target

By Barnet Nover

Diplomacy By Innuendo

THOSE UNNAMED "high officials "who, through their journalistic funnels, have been venting their spleen against Gen. Charles de Gaulle have rendered a real disservice to the Allied cause and to Franco-American relations.

If their whispered charges of high crimes and misdemeanors allegedly perpetrated by the Fighting French leader are true, the full dossier of substantiating facts should have been made public long ago.

So far no such facts have been brought to light. We are only given to understand that the facts exist and are asked to take their existence on faith.

That would not be so difficult if our policy toward France and the French during recent months had been clear cut, straightforward and understandable. It has not. It has been devious, disingenuous and bewildering.

No wonder, then, that the suspicion exists that the campaign of innuendo which these unnamed "high officials" are carrying out against De Gaulle behind the safe cover of anonymity is wholly unjustified. And these suspicions will not down unless and until the facts are made public.

IN A VERY significant dispatch from Algiers to the New York Times, Drew Middleton warns us that "inestimable damage can be done to relations between France and the western Allies if America and Britain continue to intervene in French politics to frustrate De Gaulle. What is necessary for the peace of the Atlantic nations, according to military observers, is the rebuilding of a France that is both strong and friendly to the United States and Britain. The course that we are currently pursuing gives little sign of this."

MR. MIDDLETON'S use of the word "intervene" is most interesting. When the North African political problem arose, following the landing of American and British troops in Morocco and Algiers, our "high officials" (unnamed then as now) justified the policy of retaining the Vichy status quo in North Africa on the ground that we had no right to intervene in French domestic affairs.

From the first this "nonintervention policy was anti-De Gaulle. The admittedly interventionist policy we are now pursuing in North Africa strangely conforms to the same pattern.

But stack the cards as we might against the Fighting French leader he has managed somehow to have his way despite—it may actually be because of—our opposition.

THE CHARGES against De Gaulle have run the full gamut, going round and round like a dog chasing its tail.

He has been accused of being a reactionary, a Communist or Communist stooge, a Fascist or just a plain megalomaniac adventurer.

He has been described alternately and with equal vehemence as the tool of the British and a violent Anglophobe.

He caused endless irritations in certain Washington quarters by insisting at all times and in all seasons that the laws of Vichy be abolished and the laws of the Third Republic restored.

That has not stopped his anonymous critics from asserting that he is "animated by dictatorial tendencies." All of which boils down to the simple fact that in official American (and now British) eyes, Charles de Gaulle is just another Dr. Fell as in that old jingle:

I do not like you, Dr. Fell,
The reason why I cannot tell,
But this I know and know full well,
I do not like you, Dr. Fell.

THE ONE THING that even De Gaulle's bitterest critics have never denied is that he is a Frenchman. Perhaps that is the key to the whole trouble.

De Gaulle is a Frenchman who, whatever his personal idiosyncrasies, and the appear to be many and difficult, stands for something in French eyes.

Because he does, the French forgive him his faults and remember his virtues. Our officials are intent on remembering his faults and forgetting his virtues, so much so that one "high official" went so far in an interview the other day as to talk of the "fiction of Free Fighting French that has been built around his (De Gaulle's) name."

Unfortunately for the peace of mind of these "high officials," we are not dealing in North Africa with a "fiction," but with a fact, the stubborn, inescapable fact that our dislike of De Gaulle is not shared by the French. He may be a blankety-blank so-and-so to us, but to the French, he is, at any rate, their blankety-blank so-and-so. We could do much worse in our policy toward France and the French than to start from that point.

French Generals

Please allow me to make a few comments on one sentence in Lindley's column of July 2. "General de Gaulle's judgment as to which French generals are fitted to train and lead in battle the French forces of Africa may conceivably be less good than General Eisenhower's and General Alexander's especially when De Gaulle's judgment seems to be highly flavored by politics."

General Catroux and General Legentilhomme commanded the Fighting French troops that battled the Vichy French in Syria.

In the third Libyan campaign, General Leclerc proved of great assistance against the Italian desert garrison, while in the recent North African campaign the general marched with his gallant men over 1500 miles to join their British Allies against the common enemy. In May-June 1942, the Fighting French General Koenig successfully stalled the German General Rommel at Bir Hacheim.

Compare the records of these men with a general like Boisson, who stalled the British-Free French seizure of Dakar, and with Admiral Darlan, who having betrayed the cause of the Third Republic, then worked with the Germans.

There are the generals who opposed American landings at Oran and elsewhere on the coast.

Those who have fought with us are snubbed; their leader, whose idea concerning modern war the Germans themselves copied, has to the modern columnist of the Lindley school of thought become a politician. Is it not better that the generals have the confidence of those they lead and of the nation that they shall liberate than the confidence of the appeasement compromising clique of the State Department?

Not Internees

I will not attempt to answer the letter from Fred S. McCargar, published in your paper of July 3, but I do want to ask you, why the heading, "Japanese Internees?" Mr. McCargar's letter made not the slightest reference to those who are held in internment camps; these include suspicious characters of Japanese, Italian, German, and even native American background. Mr. McCargar's letter, on the other hand, dealt specifically with those who were evacuated from the West Coast entirely on the basis of racial origin, and who are living in relocation centers—not internment camps—they are in no way internees. Those who are interested in relocating loyal evacuees are in no way concerned with "Japanese internees"; hence, your caption is entirely misleading.

History Repeats Itself

Mr. Quinn's letter regarding Adventist's prophecies, was interesting. Prophesying, after all, is a very harmless and innocent form of entertainment. He might have gone back some 2000 years for prophecies that the end of the world was at hand. In Matthew xvi:28, we read: "Verily I say unto you, there be some standing here, which shall not taste of death, till they see the Son of man coming in His kingdom." Those good men of old believed that Christ was soon to return.

In The Post of March 6, 1943, the Rev. Mr. Boothby says: "Seven Terrible Plagues Coming!—Rivers, Seas and Oceans Turned to Blood." As blood is made in the bodies of animals, it would be interesting to see a sea of it!

Well, we have one "terrible plague" with us now! War! And that in its train brings more death and disease. There are many now seeing the end of this world on the Russian Front, for when death comes it is the end of this world for that man!

"Reader" (Post June 30) says: "In old days, battles were fought on battlefields . . . today they concentrate their wrath on killing innocent civilians, including little children." What "old days" does he refer to? In Deut. ii:33-35, we read: "And we took all his cities at that time, and utterly destroyed the men, and the women, and the little ones of every city, we left none to remain." Joshua x:40 writes: "He left none remaining, but utterly destroyed all that breathed, as the Lord God of Israel commanded." Ancient history is simply repeating itself, and repeating the atrocities of old by atrocities of the present! How proud God must be of this human race He has created!

Forgotten Austria

I read with great satisfaction the editorial "Forgotten Austria" in The Post of June 29. As a former Austrian who fights now in the United States Army for our democratic ideals and the destruction of Hitler's forces of the evil, it was most gratifying to see that The Post at least has not forgotten unhappy Austria. I think that every American citizen of Austrian origin is as anxious to see Austria liberated and reborn as I am myself.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

All-Out Arlene Sets Mom At Ease

My Dear Arlene:

I just read in the papers about the President signing the bill which puts the WAACS in the Regular Army instead of being just an auxiliary and it worries me. This makes you eligible for combat, doesn't it? And gives you a gun and everything.

And it says in the paper it makes you subject to all the military discipline of the Army, like being put in the guardhouse and even court-martialed. I know you are not the kind of girl to do anything that would mean a court-martial, but you could get blamed for something you did not do, and I am worried about the whole thing.

Do write me at once all about it. Love, MOTHER.

Dear Ma—

There is nothing to worry about, mother. What it really means is that we just drop an "A." I become a "WAC" instead of a "WAAC." That will be hard at first, but we will get used to it. We will not be any Women's Battalions of Death or do any of the actual fighting, mom. Under the new law we are combatant, but Secretary Stimson will issue an order that we will not do any fighting, except maybe among ourselves.

I don't know exactly what we will do under the head of "operational duties," but I am not counting on being any female Napoleon or glamorous Sergeant York. I guess that this new regulation will just permit the Army more leeway instead of having to consider a lot of technicalities when it wants us to do something. We will not have any guns, I am sure. As Nellie Shaw says, the men's Army has enough to make it nervous without having the girls around with firearms in their hands.

We won't have to continue in the organization under the new setup unless we want to. Under the bill a girl has to enlist all over again. If she doesn't wish to, she is honorably discharged. She gets 90 days to make up her mind. That is pretty short notice for a woman, but it will have to do.

In the new setup we get the same benefits that men soldiers get, with war pensions and so forth and probably free mailing privileges. Yes, we will be subject to Army discipline and could be tossed into the guardhouse or court-martialed for any serious offenses, but there is no danger of that. They won't court-martial a girl for having her hair too long, coming to inspection with a run in her stocking or wearing a hat at the wrong angle. And I don't expect the guardhouse will be used much for us. Put a girl in a guardhouse and she would have it all dolled up in no time with pink curtains, rattan furniture and everything.

Anyhow, I understand all the guardhouses in the Army are occupied by men, and that there are not enough to go around as it is. They would not put a girl in the same guardhouse with a jeep. The Army is funny in matters like that.

Well, I hope I have explained everything and put you at ease, mother. I do not feel any different under the new setup, it means no change in uniform and we will wear the same hats, so the move is something less than revolutionary. Your loving daughter, ARLENE.

Curfew For Cars

Preceding the present gasoline rationing program I have been accustomed to driving from two to three thousand miles per month and more than 60% of this mileage has been purely for personal pleasure. Recognizing the critical need for some regulation of gasoline consumption I have reduced the use of my car to what we term essential driving. Since January 1, 1943, our total milage has not exceeded 45 miles per month. We have stuck with this plan despite the fact that we seem to see around us an indefinite amount of cheating and chiseling.

The recent announcement that we A-book holders will soon lose that last 1½ gallon of gasoline is the last straw. Last Friday evening between 10 and 10:30 o'clock my wife and I stood at the intersection of Wisconsin and Massachusetts for approximately 15 minutes waiting for a bus. During this period we counted 109 cars in approximately 15 minutes. It was our opinion that none of these cars, excepting those identified as embassy and medical, were being used on essential driving.

Such observations as these do not promote a desire to conform to restrictive regulations. Why can't we have a curfew on cars applied at 7 p. m. and force them off the streets? Car owners who get B and C ration books on the strength of their need for essential driving should be required to write on the windshield stickers the hours of the day when this essential driving would take place. If this were done, enforcement officers could see at a glance whether the driver was violating the provisions under which he secured his extra gasoline. JAMES E. PIXLEE.

Today And Tomorrow

The Propaganda That Backfired

A LEARNED friend tells me that "propaganda is that branch of the art of lying which nearly deceives your friends without deceiving your enemies." For a long time now, but in recent days ever more blatantly and recklessly, the American public has been subjected to an officially inspired campaign of propaganda on the subject of France. It has nearly deceived a large number of well-intentioned people. But not for long. There is a free press in this country and in Great Britain. What is more, the policy which the propaganda supports is wholly unworkable.

LIPPMANN

The mechanics of the propaganda are these: access to the data about our French policy is under strict control, on the ground of military secrecy, in Algiers and in Washington. Then news and opinion is fed out in several different ways. It is fed out through reporters who in the ordinary routine of the newspaper profession publish the selected news and opinion, ascribing it to "high officials," "unimpeachable authorities," etc., etc. Exciting tid-bits are also fed out to the professional rumormongers. Finally, a journalist of standing is selected, given special access to information: in return for their special privilege, information which has to come out because it can no longer be concealed, is presented to the public in a form most agreeable to those in authority.

THE NET result of the whole procedure is the manipulation of public opinion by preventing an independent examination of the facts. This method of manipulation is wholly objectionable, and a far more serious impairment of the freedom of the press than are the amateurish pamphlets of the O. W. I., about which Congress has raised such a row. For it is one thing, not much good and yet not terribly bad, for a government to issue propaganda with its own official imprint candidly upon it.

But the practice of opening the official files as a special privilege to hand-picked journalists is very bad. It corrodes the independence of the press. Those who enjoy the privilege must pay for it. Those who hope to enjoy it find it expedient to make themselves agreeable to the keepers of the secret files.

THE WHOLE subject is one, not for Congress, but for the newspaper profession itself, and it might well be examined by the American Society of Newspaper Editors. It has come to a head in recent days by the publication in the Saturday Evening Post of a series of articles by Mr. Demaree Bess. In these articles Mr. Bess states that he went to North Africa and was given access by General Eisenhower to the official files. But it is obvious that Mr. Bess did not get to North Africa without his trip being arranged in Washington, and it is equally obvious that General Eisenhower did not open his files to Mr. Bess, rather than to some other journalist or to all journalists, except on instructions from Washington.

Mr. Bess has accordingly sung for his supper. Nevertheless, being a competent correspondent, he has tried to put down important information which he found in the files. As a result, the world now has for the first time some knowledge of the contents of the original secret agreement between Mr. Murphy and General Giraud. This agreement was made one week before the landing in North Africa, and while General Giraud was still in France. Mr. Bess is undoubtedly right in dwelling on this agreement as essential to an understanding of the political aspects of our policy in North Africa.

MR. BESS tells us that "our agreement specified that we would obtain General Giraud's consent before admitting any 'outside elements'—to our African expeditionary force, an obvious reference to the British and to followers of General de Gaulle." Mr. Murphy made this commitment in the name of the United States Government at a moment when he knew that the larger part of the first African expeditionary force and most of the naval force, already embarked and at sea, was British.

MR. BESS insists on the character of this commitment: "the Murphy-Giraud accord stipulated that any expedition to French territory would be an essentially American expedition, under American command, with no participation of any outside elements, French or otherwise. It stated that only after our landings, and by agreement with the local French and American authorities, would it be permitted, in case of need, that non-American Allies (i. e. the British) or outside French (i. e. the Fighting French) might be sent into any of these territories."

Mr. Bess says "in making this agreement, Murphy, of course, acted on orders from Washington."

THIS REVELATION speaks for itself. The reader must consult his own conscience as to whether the deception of General Giraud was one of those acts which must be accepted on the ground of "military expediency." But the reader should know that this profoundly embarrassing disclosure has been made not by the critics of the Administration policy but by its own chosen and specially privileged newspaper correspondent. There are other journalists who have known for many months enough about this secret agreement to know that it was very embarrassing. They have kept a discreet silence, and did not ask for its publication, because they hoped and believed that the embarrassment of the disclosure could be avoided. But now Mr. Bess has spilled the beans.

THE MESS, for it is a most unappetizing mess, can be cleaned up during General Giraud's visit in Washington. The way to clean it up is to stop at once the official propaganda campaign for Giraud against De Gaulle. After Mr. Bess's disclosure this campaign is nothing but a stubbornly dangerous attempt to impose upon the French nation the obsolete terms of the Murphy-Giraud agreement. The effect of the campaign is to injure General Giraud and to outrage not only General de Gaulle and his followers but General Giraud and his followers, not to mention the British, our other allies, and the conscience of the American people.

Having stopped the propaganda campaign, the imperative thing to do in the interest of everyone is to recognize the French Committee of National Liberation as the sole trustee of French interests and the sole authority in French affairs. Then, the next thing to do is to treat with General Giraud as the representative of that committee, and not as our appointee, in regard to measures which will permit the French, as our allies and not as our dependents, to train and equip a fighting army for their own liberation.

THEN WE could all make a fresh and clean start, letting bygones be bygones.

Giraud Plans War On Japs

By Edward T. Folliard

Once France Is Free

Gen. Henri Honore Giraud said yesterday that he expected to lead a French army of 300,000 men in the invasion of Europe. Once Germany and Italy are defeated, he said, France will join in the war on Japan and help liberate the Pacific.

The stalwart French hero said that right now only about 75,000 of his troops in Africa were properly armed, but he announced that President Roosevelt had promised equipment for the entire 300,000.

General Giraud yesterday afternoon was host at a brilliant reception at the Shoreham Hotel. This brought out the whole French colony, Giraudists as well as De Gaullists, and such Capitol Hill veterans as Senator "Cotton Ed" Smith of South Carolina. State Department officials were there, too, the first time they had had a chance to see the strapping French general.

White House Dinner Guest

Later, General Giraud was a dinner guest at the White House, his third get-together with President Roosevelt in as many days.

General Giraud, who is commander in chief of the French Forces in North and West Africa and copresident with Gen. Charles de Gaulle of the Committee for the Liberation of France in Algeria, was asked at this press conference if Great Britain was supplying any of the equipment.

He smiled and said:

"Now, if Great Britain in the goodness of her heart, wants to give me something more, I am quite willing to take it, because I am a beggar and I will take anything, provided it is good."

Shortly before Gen. Giraud saw the press in the Pentagon Building, President Roosevelt hinted broadly that the United States did not intend to recognize the French committee in Algeria as the central authority for the people of France.

The President was asked at his press conference what he thought of the charge that the United States and Great Britain were interfering unduly in French affairs.

Talks Strictly Military

Mr. Roosevelt pointed out that 95 per cent of the French people were still under the heel of Germany. There isn't any France at the present time, he said.

He said that the committee in Algeria was made up of the 5 per cent of Frenchmen outside of France. As for the question of recognition, he said, that hadn't come up yet.

Asked about his two talks with Gen. Giraud, the President said these had been strictly military.

General Giraud's press conference was strictly military, too. At the outset, Col. Stanley J. Grogan, acting director of the Army's Bureau of Public Relations, read a statement which said that General Giraud, as a member of the French Committee for National Liberation, did not wish "to take a political position that might involve the whole committee." Therefore, all questions would have to relate to military matters.

Impressed by U. S. Shrines

The French commander in chief, again attired in a cream-colored linen uniform with its five gold stars on either sleeve, at first read a prepared statement in French. This contained the pledge that, once the war in Europe is over, France would join in the fight against Japan.

General Giraud then made an impromptu talk. He said his statement had been prepared in tranquillity; he wanted to give the reporters something that was alive. And so he told about his pilgrimage to Mount Vernon, to the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, and to the Lincoln Memorial, and talked about his feelings as he saw these three American shrines.

At Mount Vernon he found much to remind him of General Lafayette, who helped General Washington to liberate this country.

"And it occurred to me," he said, with obvious feeling, "that history, in some odd ways, often repeats itself."

General Giraud's remarks were translated by Lieut. Col. Leon E. Dostert, A. U. S., a graduate of Georgetown University.

Praises U. S. Troops

In talking about the Battle of Tunisia, General Giraud told how he met a captured German officer who looked familiar to him. It turned out that this German had once been station at Koenigstein, the German war prison, from which Giraud escaped in April, 1942.

General Giraud praised the American troops in Tunisia, and cited their eagerness for battle. They were, he said, "worthy successors to their elders of 1918." He talked also of the 70,000 French troops who helped defeat the Axis there—the Moroccans, the Senegales and others. Fifteen thousand of them, he said, died.

Using a French figure of speech, he said that these French troops went into battle with "wooden sabers and straw guns." Yet, he said, they fought a crack army with the most modern weapons.

General Giraud was asked just how large an army the French could raise in Africa for the invasion of Hitler's Fortress of Europe.

He answered 300,000. This was the number, he said, that would form the "expeditionary corps." He said it would include the troops of General de Gaulle as well as his own, but would not include those troops that would be used to patrol French colonial areas.

This striking force of 300,000, he said, would be made up of 125,000 French or Europeans, 50,000 Senegales, 50,000 Moroccans, and 125,000 Algerians and Tunisians.

A reporter asked Gen. Giraud if it were true that the morale of the French troops had suffered recently. The French commander fairly leaped to answer this.

"The morale of the French army of tomorrow," he said, "will be the same as the French army of yesterday."

Any army that had lost 15,000 out of 70,000, as his own had in Tunisia, he said, could be depended on to be ready for battle.

He was asked about the morale of the Germans in Tunisia.

"It was good," he said. "That army was disciplined, well-trained, and eager for battle."

General Giraud checked himself here, however, to tell of an incident that possibly pointed to the "deterioration" in the German air force. He said he was at General Alexander's headquarters and was given the "radio intercepts."

Kesselring Rebuked Pilots

One was a message broadcast by Marshal Kesselring to his German pilots forbidding them to run away from the American and British pilots. Kesselring said this conduct was "shameful," and he ordered the German pilots to fight on, no matter what the odds.

The Allied air superiority over the Germans in the last days of the battle, Gen. Giraud said, was 10 to 1.

All in all, though, the German morale was good, General Giraud said. The Germans, he added, fought up to the last minute in the War of 1914-18, and they can be expected to do likewise in this war. The battle ahead, he warned, will be a hard one.

"Goodby, gentlemen," Giraud said, "send me all the materiel you can. I swear to you we will know how to use it."

The reporters applauded him vigorously, something they had been known to do before only in the case of Prime Minister Winston Churchill and Mme. Chiang Kai-shek.

Grin and Bear It

By Lichty

"Calm yourself, Mr. Snodgrass! You know how the laundry is nowadays—they merely returned the wrong caps!"

Text of Statement by Giraud

The text of a statement by Gen. Henri Honore Giraud, issued at his press conference yesterday follows:

I am here as soldier, representing France at war.

Five months ago, I had the pleasure of meeting President Roosevelt for the first time. I can say that we became friends right away. My visit today has no other purpose but to carry forward with him this cooperation based on mutual confidence, which will be so useful in bringing the French war effort to a maximum, and insuring the equipment and rearmament of all French forces.

Frenchmen who have the good fortune of being away from the enemy's yoke must show by their unity to their follow countrymen subjected to the odious presence of the Germans that they spare neither their efforts nor their blood to help in the liberation of their country.

It is through the army that they will show strikingly their will to win and their faith in the success of the Allied cause. The Anfa (Casablanca) conference was a major step in the joint effort for the liberation of France. The achievements of the French army in Tunisia are the proof of the valor of our troops. But there still remain thousands of trained, experienced soldiers all of whom are impatiently waiting for modern weapons. They will go forth to fight with absolute confidence and irresistible drive as soon as they have those weapons in hand. I am certain that they shall have them.

Sole Aim: Axis Defeat

As copresidents of the French Committee of National Liberation, General de Gaulle and I have established as our sole aim the defeat of the Axis forces, the liberation of France, the return to a political structure in conformity with the natural aspirations of our country.

From the efforts shared with our Allies, from the sufferings of the American, British and French soldiers, new bonds have been formed. The friendship and mutual respect achieved in combat will unite these soldiers forever.

Today all the resources of the French empire—our manpower, bases, ships, communications, all that we have—are part of the Allied pool. Thus France, to the limits of her ability, takes her place among the United Nations, putting both her physical strength and her moral energies at the disposal of the Allied cause.

Pacific Aid Pledged

The people of France have already shown you their deep gratitude. They know that the defeat of Italy and Germany will not bring an end to the fighting. On the other side of the globe, another aggressor must learn the cost of violating the fundamental laws of humanity. I give you the following pledge: France will be at your side to liberate the Pacific from Japanese domination, even as she will remain with you to build a peace treaty that will be lasting and just, but also realistic.

I want to tell you that France is living in the hope and in the confidence of Allied victory; with each passing day her resistance grows because of that conviction and in spite of grievous suffering and total exhaustion.

The people of France are eagerly following the achievements of the heroic Soviet army. Every home has a map of the Mediterranean area and the epic drive of the British Eighth Army is known to everyone. France is listening each day for news of the Pacific. Hour by hour, Frenchmen have followed the Battle of Tunisia, where for the first time your men encountered the Germans and the Italians. And when the day of victory came, they could not conceal their joy.

Lauds U. S. Troops

I have seen your soldiers under fire. As a soldier I observed them. I do not wish to flatter you, but I can tell you that their gallantry deserves all admiration. They are the worthy successors of their elders of 1918.

Finally, let me tell you that at the present moment all my thoughts go out to the great soldier who leads all Allied armies in North Africa. I am glad to say that I have always had the best relations with General Eisenhower. I know I can claim him as a friend and I thank him for being such a loyal and able supporter of the French army.

Mellett Bows Out

Leaves OWI Job

Lowell Mellett, who was director of the now defunct Office of Government Reports, resigned yesterday as chief of OWI's Motion Picture Bureau, Domestic Branch, whose budget Congress cut from last year's $1,300,000 to $50,000.

Mellett will now devote all of his time to his "other" job, that of administrative assistant to President Roosevelt at $10,000 a year.

OWI Director Elmer Davis expressed indebtedness to Mellett for establishing cordial relations with the motion picture industry. The resignation is effective July 15.

Mellett's OGR was absorbed by OWI last June under Executive Order. At that time, Mellett was not only head of OGR but also coordinator of Government films. He continued these duties under the reorganization.

Mellett was editor of the Washington News 16 years before leaving in 1937 after strongly supporting Roosevelt in the Supreme Court reorganization fight. He then became head of the National Emergency Council which was intended to coordinate relief and recovery agencies and furnish information to the press, radio and movies, and subsequently became a Presidential aid.

Creation of OGR led to the construction of a $600,000 information center on Pennsylvania Avenue between Fourteenth and Fifteenth Streets Northwest. The building now houses miscellaneous bureaus, the War Housing Center and recruiting services for women.

Davis said, "Our funds will not permit any production of motion pictures by OWI for domestic use. We will, however, continue to discharge our responsibility for the coordination of Government films and for liaison between the Government and the motion picture industry."

Civilian War Units Ready to Resume Active Duty Here

Local officials and civilian volunteers are ready to go ahead with putting civilian war services in the District back in active duty as soon as the President signs the blackout bill allocating $25,000 for operating expenses. The bill was passed Thursday night by the Senate.

Commissioners will appoint a director in charge of the service to be recognized as an official District agency operating under the Commissioners through a volunteer service board.

For the past two months civilian war services in the District have been being carried on in part through cooperation of the regional OCD office and an emergency voluntary steering committee since resignation of the executive committee in April.

Funds Are Granted To Study Polio

Minneapolis, July 9 (AP).—A grant of $175,000 to the University of Minnesota for a 5-year study of infantile paralysis by a special medical unit of the school was announced today by Basil O'Connor, president of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, and W. J. Coffee, president of the university.

Memories of Air Blitz

By John Steinbeck

Trivial Details Always Enter Stories

London.—People who try to tell you what the blitz was like in London start with fire and explosions and then almost invariably end up with some very tiny detail which crept in and set and became the symbol of the whole thing for them. Again and again this happens in conversations. It is as though the mind could not take in the terror and the noise of the bombs and the general horror and so fastened on something small and comprehensible and ordinary. Every one who was in London during the blitz wants to describe it, wants to solidify, if only for himself, something of that terrible time.

"It's the glass," says one man, "the sound in the morning of the broken glass being swept up, the vicious, flat tinkle. That is the thing I remember more than anything else, that constant sound of broken glass being swept up on the pavements. My dog broke a window the other day and my wife swept up the glass and a cold shiver went over me. It was a moment before I could trace the reason for it."

You are going to dine at a small restaurant. There is a ruin across the street from the place, a jagged, destroyed stone house. Your companion says, "On one of the nights I had an engagement to have dinner with a lady at this very place. She was to meet me here. I got here early and then a bomb hit that one." He points to the ruin. "I went out in the street. You could see plainly, the fires lighted the whole city. That front wall was spilled into the street. You could see the front of a cab sticking out from the pile of fallen stone. Thrown clear, right at my feet as I came out of the door, was one plae blue evening slipper. The toe of it was pointing right at me."

Another points up at a wall, the building is gone, but there are five fireplaces, one above another, straight up the wall. He points to the topmost fireplace. "This was a high explosive bomb," he says. "This is on my way to work. You know, for six months, there was a pair of long stockings hanging in front of that fireplace. They must have been pinned up. They hung there for months, just as they had been put up to dry."

"I was passing Hyde Park," says a man, "when a big raid came over. I went down into the gutter. Always did that when you couldn't get a shelter. I saw a great tree, one like those, jump into the air and fall on its side not so far from me—right there where that scoop is in the ground. And then a sparrow fell in the gutter right beside me. It was dead all right. Concussion kills birds easily. For some reason I picked it up and held it for a long time. There was no blood on it or anything like that. I took it home with me. Funny thing, I had to throw it right away."

One night, when the bombs screamed and blatted, a refugee who had been driven from place to place and tortured in all of them until he finally reached London, couldn't stand it any more. He cut his throat and jumped out of a high window. A girl, who was driving an ambulance that night, says: "I remember how angry I was with him. I understand it a little now, but that night I was furious with him. There were so many who got it that night and they couldn't help it. I shouted at him I hoped he would die, and he did.

"People save such strange things. One elderly man lost his whole house by fire. He saved an old rocking chair. He took it everywhere with him; wouldn't leave it for a moment. His whole family was killed, but he hung on to that rocking chair. He wouldn't sit in it. He sat on the ground beside it, but you couldn't get it away from him."

Two reporters sat out the blitz in the Savoy Hotel playing chess and fortifying themselves. When the bombs came near they went under the table. "One or the other of us always reached up and cheated a little," the reporter says.

Hundreds of stories, and all of them end with a little incident, a little simple thing that stays in your mind.

"I remember the eyes of people going to work in the morning," a man says. "They was a quality of tiredness in those eyes I haven't forgotten. It was beyond a tiredness you can imagine—a desperate kind of weariness that never expected to be rested. The eyes of the people seemed to be deep, deep in their heads, and their voices seemed to come from a long distance. And I remember during a raid seeing a blind man standing on the curb, tapping with his stick and waiting for some one to take him across through the traffic. There wasn't any traffic, and the air was full of fire, but he stood there and tapped until some one came along and took him to a shelter."

In all of the little stories it is the ordinary, the commonplace thing or incident against the background of the bombing that leaves the indelible picture.

"An old woman was selling little miserable sprays of sweet lavender. The city was rocking under the bombs and the light of burning buildings made it like day. The air was just one big fat blasting roar. And in one little hole in the roar her voice got in—a squeaky voice: 'Lavender!' she said. 'Buy Lavender for luck.'"

The bombing itself grows vague and dreamlike. The little pictures remain as sharp as they were when they were new.

The Gallup Poll

House Resolution on Postwar Policy Finds Wide Support in National Survey

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., July 9.—If the central idea of the Fulbright Resolution in the House of Representatives were submitted to the people in a national referendum, they would give their Congressmen an unmistakable mandate to adopt the measure.

That is indicated by the results of an informal "sampling" referendum just completed by the Institute from coast to coast. Interviews were conducted among a cross-section of voters so selected as to represent the views of the Nation's total electorate of 60 million.

Approved by House Unit

The House Resolution, introduced by Representative Fulbright of Arkansas and unanimously approved by the House Foreign Affairs Committee, is a short statement of policy which provides:

"That the Congress hereby expresses itself as favoring the creation of appropriate international machinery with power adequate to establish and to maintain a just and lasting peace among the nations of the world, and as favoring participation by the United States therein."

Similar in general intent to the Ball Resolution in the Senate, the Fulbright Resolution has precipitated some controversy among political leaders, a number of whom feel that it goes too far toward committing the United States to postwar interventionism.

So far as the public is concerned, however, there is wide general acceptance of the principle that in the period after this war the United States should take a more active part in world affairs than it did after the last war.

78% Affirmative Vote

Voters in the survey were handed a copy of the Fulbright resolution and asked:

"Do you want your Congressman to vote for or against this resolution?"

The results show an affirmative vote of nearly 8 to 2, as follows:

For	78%
Against	9
Undecided	13

Obviously at this stage of the discussion of postwar policy, the public can do no more than vote on the general principle of participation in world affairs.

Just how such a principle can be translated into specific programs will present many problems, and there is no assurance that the public will approve all of the specific plans when it comes time to put them into effect.

What the public is saying in today's survey, as it has said in others in the past, is something like this: "We think the general principle of participating in world affairs is preferable to a general policy of isolationism such as we followed after the last war. Just how this new policy is going to be worked out and be put into effect, we do not know; but we favor trying to arrive at some basis for full American participation in carrying out the peace that follows this war."

Farm Machinery Rationing Causes 30-Acre Hay Loss

Owosso, Mich., July 9 (AP).—Because he has neither hay loader nor harvest help, Robert Hudson, Bennington township farmer, has plowed his entire hay crop of 30 acres in what he called a protest against the Government's farm machinery rationing program.

Hudson said his crop included 10 acres of timothy and 10 acres of new alfalfa that cost $34 a bushel for seed. Because he was unable to get the loader, he said his only alternative was to plow it under.

In Shiawassee County, where he lives, only 16 hay loaders were allotted this year, or one to a township, Hudson said.

Champion of Modern France Looks Like Teutonic Knight

The striking military figure of Gen. Henri Honore Giraud yesterday strode into a conference room on the third floor of the Pentagon Building and gave the 125-odd newsmen gathered there to interview him a new idea of what the modern French leader is like.

General Giraud bears little resemblance to the popular conception of a French soldier, and as little to what most people conceive of as the typical Gallic politician. Straight and tall (he towered above many 6-footers in the room), his fine face alert with interest in the questions put to him, Giraud looks more like pictures of the ancient Teutonic knights. Only his moustache, a carefully tailored, luxuriant affair, recalled the Frenchman.

Speaking in a soft, well-modulated voice, the general introduced himself simply: "I am here as a soldier, representing France at war." Then he sat down and, poising his fingertips together above the table, went on to discuss his country, the problems faced by his army in North and West Africa, and his hopes for future cooperation with the Allies.

No Medals To Be Seen

Even when his words were bitter—he told of the toll in lives taken among his men by the well-equipped, well-trained German troops—there was no bitterness in his voice, nor in the handsome, dignified face. Only the tense gestures of his hands betrayed his emotions.

He wore the champagne-colored summer uniform of the French ranking general, but not a single medal or campaign ribbon adorned its coat. Only symbol of his authority as commander-in-chief of the French Forces in North and West Africa were five small silver stars on each sleeve. Giraud has declared that he will wear no decorations of any kind until his country is freed from the Nazi yoke and he can once more return to his native Paris to witness a new free France.

General Giraud's erect figure and firm, unlined face belie his 64 years. His eyes are keen and observant, with the curiously lidded look reminiscent of portraits of Queen Victoria. The finely chiseled features seldom relax, but the effect is less forbidding than one of determination, dignity and perhaps a little sadness.

Born of middle-class parents in Paris, Giraud was raised and educated as a soldier. His spectacular escape from the German prison fortress of Koenigstein in April, 1942, where he had been held after capture almost two years before, just prior to France's capitulation, repeated his exploit during the first World War when he escaped from a German prison with the aid of the British nurse, Edith Cavell.

His oldest son was killed a few years ago in a plane crash. But his second son, Henri, is a captain in Tusisia and the youngest boy, 22, is now an officer candidate in the French North African army. Only a few hours after he arrived in Washington on Wednesday, General Giraud received word that one of his four daughters and four grandchildren had been taken to Berlin as German hostages.

Before meeting with the newsmen yesterday morning, Giraud spent several hours visiting national monuments in and near Washington.

"As I looked at the tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington Cemetery, I remembered the thousands of crosses on the hill in Tunisia where Frenchmen gave their lives in battle," he said quietly.

Accompanied by three uniformed members of his personal staff and American Army officers, with Col. Stanley J. Grogan, chief of the War Department's Bureau of Public Relations, ranking officer, General Giraud spoke through the fluent interpretation of Lieut. Col. Leon E. Dostert, U. S. A., who accompanied him on his trip to this country.

Secret Service and Army intelligence men surrounded the room in which the interview was held, and scattered inconspicuously among the large group of reporters. But the general seemed unaware of the special arrangements made for his safety. Thoroughly at ease behind the long conference table at which he sat, he answered questions promptly and with scrupulous attention to detail. Only once he declared "secret," in reply to a question on military strategy, and smiled at the inquiring newsman.

Pastors Off For Vacations From Capital

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Church Editor

A number of the city's prominent clergymen now are enjoying well-earned vacations in the mountains and at the seaside, and others soon will be packing their bags for trips.

It has been a trying season for anyone in this war-hectic Capital, and preachers have had no easy task in gearing their programs to meet the influ of warworkers and men and women in uniform.

One of the biggest headaches, we learn, is trying to keep Sunday schools well-staffed with teachers, since so many capable workers have been among the Federal workers transferred to other cities. And scores of young men and women who were "sparkplugs" in the church youth programs are now in far corners of the globe.

Then, too, there is the problem of finding ample space to accommodate the newcomers, since no new buildings can be erected until after the war.

With many ministers out of the city, it is encouraging to note many laymen volunteer to speak at services, and aid in other ways to keep church activity humming during the summer months.

Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, pastor of Foundry Methodist Church and Senate chaplain, is at Cape May, N. J., for several weeks.

Rep. Judd to Speak At Union Service

All Souls Unitarian, Universalist National Memorial and Mount Pleasant Congregational Churches will participate in a union service tomorrow at 11 a. m. at Mount Pleasant Congregational Church. Representative Walter H. Judd of Minnesota, will occupy the pulpit.

Dr. Judd has had a wide experience as a medical missionary in China and superintendent of hospitals there under the auspices of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions. In 1939 and 1940 Dr. Judd made speeches throughout the United States in an attempt to arouse Americans to the menace of Japan's military expansion and to get an embargo on the sale of war materials to Japan.

Rev. W. N. Vincent Speaks Tomorrow

The Rev. William Nesbit Vincent, pastor of the Eastern Presbyterian Church will be the speaker tomorrow afternoon at the open air services in Lincoln Park under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. and churches in the Northeast and Southeast sections.

In Sylvan Theater

Hymnfests Will Begin Tomorrow

The value of group singing as a morale-builder was cited yesterday by officials of the War Hospitality Committee, as they praised the proposed community hymn "sings" that will begin tomorrow night at the Sylvan Theater, Washington Monument Grounds.

The monthly hymnfests are being sponsored by the Washington Federation of Christian Youth and the Federation of Churches' Defense Commission, with the cooperation of The Washington Post religious news department. Everyone is invited, but the sponsors are particularly anxious to reach men and women in uniform, warworkers and newcomers.

Song Sheets Available

Plenty of song sheets will be available at the scene of the "sing" tomorrow at 8:15 and at the front counter of The Washington Post after today at noon.

The War Hospitality Committee's statement follows:

"After close observation of servicemen and warworkers over more than a year's time, officials of the War Hospitality Committee in Washington have come to believe that group singing gives many individuals more rest and relaxation than other types of entertainment.

"It has been noted that many servicemen who have had no musical training and who have probably never before taken part in group singing will gather around a piano the minute anyone sits down to play.

Fills Growing Need

"Whether the familiar melodies and group geniality bring the individual closer to childhood memories and the security of parents and home, and friends in these times of crowded buses, loneliness, fear and war-torn nerves, or whether music merely gives the individual a feeling of poise and spiritual strength is a matter for speculation.

"At any rate, the trend is strong enough that the War Hospitality Committee in cooperation with the Federation of Churches has come to believe that a spot where warworkers and servicemen and servicewomen can gather and sing the hymns which are known in all churches will fill a growing need in wartime Washington."

. . . FREDERICK W. FABER . . .

Faith of our fathers, living still

O, how our hearts beat high with joy

Faith of our fathers, holy faith,
We will be true to thee till death.

Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS

The writer of this impressive hymn was himself a descendant of the French Huguenots. Each stirring line shows that he must have been inspired by the hardships and persecutions that his ancestors had suffered, so that we might have freedom to worship God as we will.

Greek Archbishop Hopes to Build Cathedral Here

Archbishop Spyrou Athenagoras, head of the Greek Orthodox Church in the Americas, yesterday voiced hope that his "fondest dream" would be fulfilled after this war—erection of a Greek Cathedral here as a memorial to American friends of Greece.

The prelate, here for several days on personal business, said he wanted to see erection of a Byzantine-styled cathedral, and the transfer of the present Greek Church headquarters from New York to Washington, after the war. Such a proposal already has been approved by a convention of Greek churches, he stated. Another phase of the plan would be a library containing choice literature written about America by Greeks, and about Greece, written by Americans.

Raising of funds for the proposed cathedral was halted by the war, since Americans of Greek blood have contributed heavily toward relief of their brethren stricken under the Axis heel.

The Greek Orthodox Church embraces 700,000 members in the Americas and Canada, including members of the Greek, Russian and Armenian Orthodox churches and several other bodies of the Eastern Church.

Archbishop Athenagoras, who has been staying at the Wardman Park during his visit, entrained last night for New York City.

Petrillo Firm In Ban on Transcriptions

Asserting that "we are not going to play at our own funeral march any more," James C. Petrillo, president of the American Federation of Musicians, yesterday reaffirmed his ban on the making of radio transcriptions—what he termed "canned" music—unless the radio stations employ an appropriate number of "standby musicians" every time they play a transcription.

The "standbys" will "just listen to their own music," Petrillo said at a War Labor Board hearing on whether the controversy with seven transcription companies involves a labor dispute within the jurisdiction of WLB.

The hearing was replete with Petrilloisms—quips by the musicians' leader who has been nicknamed "Czar Petrillo"—which filled the crowded chamber with laughter.

Padway's Contention

Joseph A. Padway, general counsel of the A. F. of L. who represented Petrillo, contended that the musicians had quit working for the transcription companies in August, 1941 and did not want to resume employment in the future.

Padway said the transcriptions were putting "live" musicians out of employment, leaving the union no choice but to invoke the ban.

For U. S. Without Charge

Petrillo emphasized that he was willing to make transcriptions for Government agencies without charge in spite of the ban.

WLB took no formal action on the case yesterday, but it was indicated that it would consider taking jurisdiction over the dispute and then appointing a panel to investigate the background to determine whether a strike in the usual sense of the word is in progress or whether the dispute lies outside the board's jurisdiction. In strike cases, the board customarily orders a return-to-work while the case is being considered on its merits.

Calls It Strike

A. W. Socolow, representing the transcription companies, contended that the board was confronted with "a plain garden variety strike." He asked the board to assume jurisdiction and order the musicians to resume the work they abandoned last August.

Padway stated that such an order would amount to involuntary servitude in violation of the Constitution—compelling the union to challenge it in the courts.

Although Petrillo disclaimed any desire to make transcriptions, he also made it clear that he did not want anyone else to make the discs—that he would use every lawful means to prevent their manufacture.

He disclosed that he had made arrangements with British and Mexican musicians not to make any "scab" discs for importation into the United States to lift the ban.

Socolo, speaking for the transcription companies, told the board:

"I challenge the American Federation of Musicians to say they are abandoning jurisdiction over this field, now and perpetually, and are no longer interested in making records and won't interfere with anyone else.

"The union's hot and cold position should be nailed here and now so we'll know what we are doing. What is the meaning of all this about a no-strike pledge we read in the papers? If you remove the restraints this union has placed on its members, no constitutional rights will be violated."

Woman Slain by Clubber, Second Is Near Death

By the Associated Press

New York, July 9.—Police today attempted to establish a motive for the savage clubbing attack that brought death to one 30-year-old business woman and critical injuries to her roommate.

The two unmarried women were beaten yesterday apparently as they lay in bed together in their Brooklyn apartment. Police said neither woman had been criminally assaulted, nor had an investigation revealed robbery as a motive.

Miss Betty Fitleson, clerk, had been dead six hours or more when her body was found on the double bed in the living room of the three-room apartment, Dr. M. E. Martin, deputy medical examiner, reported.

Her roommate, Miss Alice Clarfield, also 30, was removed to Brooklyn Jewish Hospital, where she was reported to be in critical condition. There she recovered consciousness long enough to say "A man attacked us both." Then she confused investigators by adding: "I have no injuries."

Capt. John J. McGowan of the homicide squad said later today he had a "definite clew" in the case but was unable to question Miss Clarfield, who was reported to be still unable to talk coherently.

On the apartment floor near the bed was a blood-covered piece of 2 by 4 lumber about 2 feet long which Capt. John J. McGowan, head of the Brooklyn homicide squad, said probably was the weapon use.

Dr. Martin said that both women had been struck several times and that their skulls had been fractured. Miss Fitleson was wearing pajamas and Miss Clarfield was clad only in a disarranged housecoat.

All the windows were closed, but Capt. McGowan said an intruder might have come in through a window and, after closing it, left through a door.

Invasion Imminent French Warned

London, July 9 (INS).—The British Broadcasting Co. today stressed the imminence of the European invasion by warning French housewives to get in a month's supply of food to tide them over the period when transportation and supply stocks will be disorganized.

Neutral reports received via Switzerland revealed French housewives took to heart the B. B. C.'s warning and stormed shops, buying up all available stocks.

Nats' Squeeze Play in 13th Beats Tribe, 1-0

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Cleveland, July 9.—Frank Leahy, the Notre Dame football coach, is not so stuck on the T-formation that he is willing to be stuck with it under all circumstances. The T-formation is very apt to get the heave-ho right out of South Bend next fall, Leahy was saying yesterday.

POVICH

Here to polish off the details of staging the Notre Dame's game with Navy in the big Cleveland Stadium, Leahy said he wasn't at all sure the Irish would retain the T-formation which he installed last season with such excellent, if not immediate, success.

He still likes the T-formation, but Leahy was saying "no Angello Bertelli, no T-formation at Notre Dame perhaps. You need a quarterback like Bertelli to make it go. Bertelli is scheduled to be transferred out of South Bend by the Marines on November 1. That leaves us with one other quarterback, John Lujack, and he's no Bertelli."

Thus Leahy, after only one year's experience with the T, subscribes to the long-expounded theories of its inventors, Clark Shaughnessy and George Halas, that without the proper type of quarterback, the T-formation is not only a waste of time, but a suicidal style of attack.

The presence of Bertelli with the Irish last season was the chief reason why Leahy installed the T, boldly shelving the traditional Rockne style of football at South Bend, and braving his critics. In Bertelli, Leahy thought he had Shaughnessy's kind of quarterback, the fellow who could manipulate the ball on an indirect pass from center, screen the plays and give you a job of passing the ball himself if it was to be a passing play.

Sid Luckman, of course, was the fellow who made the Bears' attack move and Shaughnessy called him the perfect quarterback for the T, with his smart calling of plays, his legerdemain when the ball was passed, and his own passing talents. Luckman has been more picturesquely described as the package thief of football who takes the ball from center and is never caught with the goods

At Stanford, where he took over in 1940 and turned out an unbeaten team, Shaughnessy installed the T-formation because of the presence of one man on the squad. "When I saw Frankie Albert, I knew that I had a quarterback who could handle the T-formation," Shaughnessy said. "There would have been no T at Stanford if I didn't have Albert. The T starts with one man, the quarterback. Without the proper quarterback, there's no sense trifling with it."

Shaughnessy, now Pitt's head coach, is already laying the groundwork for the installation of the T-formation at Pitt. During spring practice, he has invited his old pupil, Luckman, to the campus, just to show him in action to the Pitt backs who may end up with the quarterback job. "Letting them watch Luckman work is the best kind of coaching I can give them." says Shaughnessy.

So particular were the Bears about their quarterbacks, that George Halas last fall was reluctant to play Charley O'Rourke at the job except as Luckman's relief man. Despite O'Rourke's cleverness and his reputation for being a brainy quarterback, Halas told this department that "he's two years away from knowing how to run the T-formation like Luckman does. You don't learn it well in your first season."

Both Halas and Shaughnessy used to wonder why the Redskins did not use the "T". Halas used to say that "they've got the perfect T-man in Sammy Baugh. If they'd let him, he could fake on that indirect pass as well as Luckman, and you know he's a great passer himself. There are other teams taking up the T-formation in the pro league, but the Redskins are the best equipped as long as they have Baugh."

When Leahy decided to junk his Rockne football and put his faith in the T last year, the immediate reaction was not good. Notre Dame was tied and beaten in its first two games, and there were alumni who were ready to blame him severely. But thereafter Bertelli and the T-formation clicked, the Irish knocked off Bierman's Iowa Seahawks, and Leahy's faith in the T was renewed.

"But I'm not going to use the T-formation just because it looks pretty," Leahy was saying. "Unless Lujack can make it go like Bertelli did, or pretty close to it, Notre Dame will kiss off the T and go back to Rockne football until we can groom the right kind of quarterback for the job."

Priddy Bunts And Johnson Makes Plate

Leonard Relieved By Scarborough in 11th; Spence's Great Catch Saves Game

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Cleveland, July 9.—The Nats exhumed the old device of the squeeze bunt after all other tactics had failed to produce a run tonight and beat the Indians, 1 to 0, in the thirteenth inning of a hectic ball game.

It was so hectic that you can have your choice of Washington heroes (a) Gerry Priddy, who bunted the game's only run home, (b) Dutch Leonard who pitched four-hit, shue-out ball for ten innings or (c) Stan Spence who saved the ball game in the thirteenth with a lunging one-hand catch you should have seen.

The Nats got a start on the finish of their three-game losing streak when Bob Johnson coaxed a walk from Pitcher Jim Bagby at the start of the thirteenth. Whereupon Alex Kampouris, back in the lineup, promptly moved Johnson to third with a solid single to right.

Jake Pops Disgracefully

Now up stepped Jake Early, who back in the sixth inning had struck out with the bases full, and this time he popped up disgracefully. Tiring of such business, Manager Ossie Bluege ordered Gerry Priddy to squeeze the run home.

Priddy did it with a smart bunt, and Johnson sped across the plate a whisker ahead of Bagby's flip to Catcher Buddy Rosar.

But the Nats weren't out of the woods yet. In the last of the thirteenth, Rae Scarborough, who had taken over from Leonard in the eleventh, walked Rocco on base with the tying run with none out. A sacrifice moved him to second, and when Jeff Heath appeared as a pinchhitter for Bagby, Bluege moved left-handed Mickey Haefner to the mound.

Haefner disposed of Heath on a long fly to Case, but Oris Hockett was no such soft touch.

The 1-0 lead of the Nats didn't appear to be worth a plugged yen when Hockett slashed a low line drive into center field. Spence somehow closed the gap with a furious gallop and his last leap enabled him to get his glove on the ball—a one-hand, semi-shoestring catch that was the nicest thing the Nats saw all night.

Leonard, Scarborough and Haefner held the Indians to five hits over the thirteenth-inning distance, and they haven't yet got to third base. The Nats collected nine hits off Bagby.

Tough Night for Dutch

It was a rough night for Leonard despite the Nats' victory. The old knuckle-balling war-horse, who hadn't won a game in five weeks, made a brave bid for it tonight with his ten innings of shut-out ball, but the Nats couldn't stir up a run for him before he was retired.

They muffed their best chance to beat Bagby in the sixth when singles by Vernon and Johnson and a walk to Kampouris filled the bases with one out. That's when Jake Early struck out and Priddy tapped to the pitcher.

The Nats got something of a brutal break, perhaps, in the ninth and they went scoreless over Bluege's protests. Priddy opened that inning with a slashing two-bagger to left, and Sullivan attempted a bunt. The ball rolled toward Bagby, but Priddy made no immediate attempt to advance to third and was thrown out by 20 feet when he did run. Sullivan reached first safely. Priddy, Bluege, and the whole Washington team charged the umpires, declaring that Sullivan's bunt had struck his foot and was a foul ball, but after a conference with his mates, Umpire-in-Chief Joe Rue made no change in his decision.

Maybe it was justice that triumphed in the thirteenth.

Cards Shut Out Braves; Dodger Squeeze Wins

Cooper Yields 4 Hits To Win, 7-0; Faces Only 28 Batters, Scores Four in First

By the Associated Press

Boston, July 9.—Mort Cooper faced only 28 men and pitched three-hit ball as he led the St. Louis Cards to a 7-0 victory over the Boston Braves today. It was Cooper's eleventh win of the season.

The Cardinal ace never was endangered by the Braves after his mates teed off on Red Barrett in the first inning, when they scored four runs. Cooper fanned four Braves, issued no walks and allowed only one runner to get past first base.

St. Louis put the game on ice quickly as Lou Klein opened the game with a double, Harry Walker followed with a single, and Stan Musial and Danny Litwhiler also hit safely before Barrett got a man out. Walker Cooper's outfield fly, Whitey Kurowski's cleverly placed bunt for a single, and a wild throw by Bill Brubaker gave the Cards a four-run lead.

Barrett surrendered another run in the third, and Kirby Farrell, who started pitching against the worlds' champs in the fourth, was touched up for a pair of runs in the eighth.

Pirates Lose, 8 to 7, When Herman Pulls Surprise Bunt With Bases Loaded in 10th

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, July 9.—A surprise squeeze bunt by Billy Herman with the score tied, bases loaded and two out, climaxed a four-run tenth inning rally to give Brooklyn an 8 to 7 victory over Pittsburgh today.

The Pirates apparently had won the game by scoring three runs on four hits off Ed Head and Kirby Higbe in the top of the tenth, but the Dodgers bounced right back against Bob Klinger, fourth Pirate hurler, who failed to retire any of the five men he faced.

Here's how the Dodgers did it: Augie Galan singled. Dolph Camilli and Bobby Bragan walked, filling the bases. Galan scored when Pete Coscarart fumbled Al Glossop's grounder, Pinch Hitter Dee Moore walked, forcing in Camilli and bringing Bill Brandt to Klinger's relief. Arkie Vaughan and Frency Bordagaray hit grounders, of which Barkley, running for Bragan, and Glossop were forced at the plate. Joe Medwick then beat out an infield hit, scoring Moore with the tying run and setting the stage for Herman's winning bunt.

Tigers Climb Near Yanks, Beat A's, 4-0

Only 2 Games From Leaders; White Gives But 4 Hits in Twilight Contest

By the Associated Press

Detroit, July 9.—The second-place Detroit Tigers climbed two games from the idle New York Yankees today by blanking the Philadelphia Athletics, 4 to 0, on little Hal White's four-hitter in a twilight game.

The Tigers gathered 11 hits off Lanky Russ Christopher and two successors, and one of the safeties was Rookie Dick Wakefield's second-inning single for his 100th hit, highest total in the major leagues.

White, whose only previous victory against seven defeats came a month ago, permitted only two Mackmen to advance beyond first base, one getting as far as third.

The Tigers spotted him a three-run lead in the first inning and added a final run in the fifth. The victory ran Detroit's new winning streak to four games, with 11 triumphs in the last 13 starts.

Christopher walked Don Ross and Wakefield with one out in the first, and then Pinky Higgins and Rudy York each singled a run across. Another scored on Paul Richards' infield single before Christopher fanned White with the bases filled to end the inning.

In the fifth Wakefield walked again, moved to third on Higgins' single and scored as Ned Harris rapped into a double play.

Christopher retired in the seventh with a lame arm and went down to his sixth defeat against four victories. Everett Fagan and Herman Besse finished.

The victory gave Detroit a 2-0 edge in a five-game series. The Macks now have lost 9 of 11 starts in the West.

Hart, Conway Victor May Get Mauriello Shot

A shot at Tami Mauriello will be offered the winner of the Al Hart-Clent Conway 10-rounder at Griffith Stadium Monday night, Promoter Joe Turner said yesterday after he watched Hart, 235-pound Army War College Negro giant, go through a vigorous workout yesterday at the Twelfth Street Y. M. C. A.

Mauriello, who meets Tony Musto in Baltimore next week, has never fought in Washington but has piled up an enviable record elsewhere. Both Hart and Conway are understood to be willing to fight the Italian.

Conway, Negro soldier stationed at Fort Monmouth, N. J., has been made the underdog at 5 to 8 odds, despite the fact he decisioned Larry Lane, who held Hart to a draw. Hart, however, with an impressive record of 21 wins and two draws in his past 23 scraps, including a one-round kayo over Claudio Villar, has been showing exceptional form in recent workouts and doubtless rates favoritism.

Turner yesterday received word that Maxie Starr, who impressed with his gameness in going six rounds with Beau Jack here recently will be unable to meet Sailor Taffy Cummings of the Royal British Navy, in the eight round semifinal. Starr's Aberdeen Proving Grounds outfit has been ordered to the field for maneuvers and Starr, naturally, could not get permission to fight Turner is busy seeking a suitable opponent for the scrappy little English sailor.

Baseball Should Continue During Wartime, Says Cobb

By the Associated Press

Detroit, July 9.—Tyrus Raymond Cobb declared today that baseball by all means should continue in wartime and furthermore that he saw no reason why it couldn't survive.

Without mentioning his old rival specifically, the 56-year-old former Georgia Peach thus took another shot at Babe Ruth, who was quoted recently as saying that major league baseball was losing money fast and would surely have to close shop.

"I think baseball should continue by all means," asserted Cobb, making a business trip to Detroit where he served two decades as player and manager. "I was sorry to see the Texas League and some others fold up without putting up a stronger fight to keep going.

"Baseball deserves the right to operate. It's a great American institution and, in my opinion, it has done much to prepare young men physically and mentally for war."

Always regarded in his profession as an astute businessman, Cobb said he thought at least some of the major league clubs would make more money this year than under normal conditions.

"Spring training in the North certainly was not so expensive as training in the South," he reasoned. "All the clubs have reduced their squads and cut transportation. Besides, many of the bigger salaries were saved by the departure for the service of fellows like Hank Greenberg, Ted Williams and Joe DiMaggio.

"I haven't seen many games but from what I read, attendance has been good all along the line. My guess is that baseball will have a successful year, financially and competitively, too."

Cobb, who makes his home at Glenbrook, Nev., didn't go into the manpower question that perhaps is worrying the magnates most of all. As a captain in the Chemical Warfare Division in France in the last war, the Georgia Peach was proud to report to old friends that one son, Howell, is in officer training at Fort Riley, Kan., and another, Ty, jr., has finished interneship at Augusta, Ga., and is headed for the Army Medical Corps.

Chartak Hits Homer in 8th, Beats Bosox, 5-4

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, July 9.—Mike Chartak poked a ninth-inning home run to the roof of the right field stands tonight to give the St. Louis Browns a 5-to-4 decision over the Boston Red Sox.

Another homer by Manager Joe Cronin tied the game in the eighth after the Brownies had scored three times in a third-inning rally started by Junior Stephens' 11th circuit clout of the season.

Heurich Downs Cameo Club, 3-1; Jennings Stars

The Heurich Brewery, first half winners, broke a tie with Cameo Furniture in the second half race for The Post Industrial League title yesterday. Both clubs entered the battle with three victories and no defeats and the Beermen won, 3-1, in ten innings. Earl Jennings held Cameo to five hits, fanned seven and he allowed his lone run in the eighth. Ted Williams pitched good ball for Cameo, particularly in the pinches.

Pepco Barry played sensationally afield, making six putouts, three excellent catches of fly balls. Kidwell led the winners' attack with three hits. Cooper got a pair of singles for Cameo.

Reds Wallop Phillies, 11-4, After Trailing

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, July 9.—The Cincinnati Reds hammered out an 11 to 4 victory over the Phillies before 8286 fans at Shibe Park tonight. Clyde Shoun, taking over after Ed Heusser was pounded out in the third inning, held the Phillies scoreless thereafter, while his teammates scored 6 runs in a big sixth inning.

It was the Phillies' first defeat under the lights at home this season. Previously they had won 5 and tied 1.

The Reds combined hits by Max Marshall, Steve Mesner, Eddie Miller, Bert Haas and Gee Walker with a base on balls and a wild heave by Newton Kimball, the Phillies starting pitcher, to chase their half-dozen runs across the plate in the sixth.

Lloyd Dietz, who put out the fire in the sixth, and Charlie Fuchs let in four more Cincinnati runs over the rest of the route.

Cubs Whip Giants In Twelfth, 5-3

By the Associated Press

New York, July 9.—Although Ernie Lombardi socked out five hits in five time at bat, including a two-run homer in the ninth to tie the score at 3-3, the Chicago Cubs beats the Giants today for the first time in six games this year. The score was 5 to 3 with the Cubs getting the winning two runs in the twelfth inning on Phil Cavarretta's single, Bill Nicholson's triple and a wild pitch.

Dodds Liked Over Hagg by Dean Cromwell

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, July 9.—Before you bet all your plunder on Gunder the Wonder, list to a word from a track coach who is one of the veterans of them all: Dean Cromwell says Gil Dodds of Boston is ready to run the 2-mile in less than 9 minutes tomorrow.

With practically everybody speculating on the probable outcome of the benefit Carnival of Champions feature event, pitting Gunder Hagg, the Swedish champ, against Dodds, the divinity student, and Bobby Madrid, stellar California distance galloper, the views of the University of Southern California cinder mentor indubitably stand out.

"I've been watching Dodds and he's in top shape," reported Cromwell, seasoned builder of champions. "Dodds ran six laps faster than Hagg ran the same distance in their recent Chicago race, and he seemed to have plenty left. So the Swede may be getting more than he bargains for tomorrow.

"Dodds ran through a mile on Bovard Field (at U. S. C.) in 4:29, then added two 70-second laps to finish a mile and one-half in 6:49. This is 2 seconds faster than Hagg's 5mark for this distance in the Midwest.

"The possibilities of the pair cutting well below 9 minutes are obvious."

The meet, entire net proceeds of which will go to the Army Air Forces Air Society, will offer other sparkling attractions including Cornelius Warmerdam in the pole vault; Cliff Bourland, U. S. C., and John Fulton, Stanford, in a special assault on the world's 500-yard mark; Hal Davis of California in the sprints, and Earl Audet, national champion, in the shot put.

Ft. Belvoir Club Plays Curtis Bay

It will be the Army vs. the Coast Guard this afternoon at Griffith Stadium when the Fort Belvoir club battles the Curtis Bay team, starting at 3 p. m. All servicemen will be admitted free while 50 cents will be charged civilians. This is the second meeting of these rivals. In the first clash, Fort Belvoir turned back the Coast Guardsmen, 10-2, with a 12-hit attack. The Guards will be out to redeem themselves today.

Fort Belvoir's squad includes a host of former semipro and minor league stars, among them Pitcher Otto Seidel, who missed a chance to go to the Nats training camp in the spring of 1941 when he was drafted. Seidel has won five and lost two for the Army club. Lambert is Fort Belvoir's No. 1 hitter. The shortstop is hitting .72

Market Wise Seeks Rich Purse Today

Faces Real Competition At Jamaica

New York, July 9 (AP).—Market Wise, Lou Tufano's bargain horse who finally hit the jack pot last Monday in the Massachusetts Handicap, goes after his second rich stake of the week tomorrow when he tangles with nine worthy rivals in the $30,000-added Butler Handicap at Jamaica, where the Empire City meeting is being held.

The 5-year-old son of Broker's Tip had been foiled in every one of bids for the big sugar this year until he came rolling home in front in the Massachusetts 'Cap. That gave him $39,650 of the $48,650 he has earned in 1943 for the Jamaica contractor.

If all ten start tomorrow and he is on the front end at the finish of the mile and three-sixteenths, Tufano will pocket another $23,850—the winner's share of the purse that'll gross $34,350.

For the Butler Handicap, named in honor of the man who started the horses running at Empire City, Market Wise will pick up top weight of 127 pounds, one more than has been assigned to Mrs. Payne Whitney's Shut Out, 1942's leading money winner who was scratched from the Massachusetts Handicap.

Since Shut Out has been pretty much of a fizzle this season, Market Wise's chief opposition is expected to come from William Helis' Salto, Louis B. Mayer's Thumbs Up and William Woodward's Apache. Salto set the early pace in the Massachusetts but fell before Market Wise's stretch drive and finished second. Thumbs up was a length behind Rounders in the Stars and Stripes Handicap on the same day at Chicago.

Apache, nicely weighted under 116 pounds, is reported to be sharp and with a 11-pound pull in the weights may be able to offer the favored Market Wise a real argument. Thumbs Up also has been assigned 116 while Salto gets in with 104.

Completing the field are: The Rhymer, stablemate of Shut Out; Tommy Heard's Boysy; Joe W. Brown's Minnelusa; Arnold Hanger's Dit; and Soldier Song from Samuel Riddle's Glen Riddle

Selections at Hagerstown

Dear Al,

It looks mighty like the Maryland half-mile season will end here. Frank Small, jr., chairman of the Maryland Racing Commission, said yesterday that the Cumberland Fair Association has decided against making a formal request for permission to shift its 10-day meeting to Hagerstown. The only chance of a Cumberland meeting now will be if transportation restrictions permit the association to use its own grounds, Fairgo, located some three miles from downtown Cumberland. Betting at Hagerstown is moving along ahead of last year's record figures for the first three days. I can't let the Cumberland thing drop, however, without calling attention to Hagerstown's generous offer to the West State body. General Manager Harold Bester, acting for the stockholders, offered the track with the only priviso that Cumberland take out fire liability insurance. And, lest we forget, Charles Town should take a bow for raising $33,297.84 for the National War Fund and West Virginia charities. Last year Charles Town was first to step to the front with a no-strings-attached Victory Meeting which raised $93,000 and some change. How about that Jockey Willie Obert? He is said to be 58 years old and may be older, yet he is still riding winners. Now for our winners.

BILL.

First race—Queen Minatoka has speed and looks like the right one. Ecomint and Euchre to fill out the cash bracket.

Second race—Chief Teddy is getting to be a champion and I'm forced to string along. Randle's Queen and War Smoke are speedy and belong close.

Third race—Flying Junior whipped a somewhat similar field last out and looks like a repeater. Palgene is dangerous. Nom de Plume for the show end.

Fourth race—Roman Boy was off slowly last out and may have better racing luck. I'm going to string along. Pilot Boat and Chat Hopkins are possibilities.

Fifth race—Woodvale Lass gets another chance in this. Likes the route and is getting fit. Love Mark is in rare form. Knight's Duchess for the show.

Sixth race—J. Hal will have to be caught before another horse takes this and I belive he will stick it out. Yankee Lad and Chronos for the place and show.

Seventh race—Illka is my long-shot special here. James Pal loves the track and is a threat. War Target to take care of the others.

Eighth race—Allen Caid whipped this kind last out and is the natural choice, Hot Man and Free Trader to account for the other cash places.

Best bet—Roman Boy.

War Fund, Charity Presented $33,297 By Charles Town

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charles Town, W. Va., July 9.—Despite wartime difficulties, the Charles Town Jockey Club raised $33,297.84 for the National War Fund and West Virginia charities, it was revealed today by A. J. Boyle, president and general manager of the local racing plant. This amount is in addition to the proceeds of two day's racing reserved for a University of West Virginia endowment fund established for the children of certain members of the Merchant Marine.

Last year Charles Town raised $93,132 with Army and Navy relief and West Virginia charities sharing in the distribution of funds.

Hardheads Snapping at Bait in Bay

By Tom Moore McBride

Fisherman's luck. That's what the situation on Chesapeake Bay is this summer—a world of fish for the taking and not much of any way to get at them.

At least that was the consensus of last weekend's hardy boys who managed, one way or another to get at the bay fishing. They were unanimous in reporting good catches, especially of hardheads and perch, while rockfish—15 pounders—were said to be schooling in the lower bay.

Post Staffer Elwin Stouffer, who went by bus to Claiborne, caught a nice mess of perch fishing from a rowboat on the first day of his outing. The second day he teamed up with a party going out on a commercial boat and caught 53 hardheads running from 2 to 3 pounds. The rest of the party had similar luck, he said. Some of the best catches during the last week were made off Breezy Point.

What's more, the bay is teeming with hard crabs. Anyone who can get to a dock a couple of lines and a dip net can manage to get several dozen in the course of an afternoon.

Not GI, But Useful

Benton, Ill.—Joe Racine puts truth in the old saying about let's look daggers at the enemy. Collecting old saw blades from everywhere, he spends his spare time making daggers. He has sent 190 daggers to service men overseas at no cost to themselves. He even pays the postage.

Judicial Judgment

The Post wishes to offer an honorary membership in the Brotherhood of Sensible Men to Judge Nathan Margold of Municipal Court, who yesterday served on the bench dressed in a sport shirt. Less sensible males stared. He said, "I think we'll get our work done more quickly in our shirtsleeves".

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Some U. S. Employes May Get Checks Today

It begins to look like a payless weekend for thousands of Federal employes whose salaries have been delayed by Congress. It's still possible that some checks will be released today but it would take a near miracle to get all the employes paid. Cash payments to low-paid employes are almost certain to be held up. Guy Allen, Treasury's hard-working disbursements officer, has the checks all drawn and he's ready to release them the moment he's notified that funds have been transferred to his account. But before that the President must sign the pending appropriation bills, the Treasury must credit funds to the many agencies involved, General Accounting Office must release the funds to the agencies, and the heads of the agencies must credit payroll money to Allen's account. Then, and only then, can Allen release the checks that employes are so eager to get.

KLUTTZ

However, if the bills are signed early enough the agencies could go to a little extra trouble and expense and get an official to personally carry the orders to and from all the places they must go before the money is released. The employes have had to put up with enough inconvenience and many of them will be up against it if they don't get paid today. Welfare and credit union funds have been made available to employes in several agencies. Pay funds of the 14,000 District of Columbia employes are held up in the deficiency bill which has been at the White House for several days. The President's delay in signing it has inspired a report that the bill would become a law without his signature in protest against the rider that bans salaries of three officials called subversive by Representative Dies.

Civil Service needs building guards. Salary runs to around $1800 a year, including overtime. Apply at 820 Seventh Street Northwest . . . Commerce distributed what few pay checks were delayed to its employes yesterday . . . WPB's lumber division has been reorganized under Philip Boyd. The program branch will be under Henry Clepper; Harold Holman heads up operations and J. N. Winton is chief of the marketing control branch . . . War and Navy employes will be guests of The Post at this weekend's starlight concerts in Meridian Park. Two hundred War Department employes will be guests tonight, and tomorrow is Navy night. The concerts are sponsored by The Post chiefly to provide recreation at popular prices. Tickets are available at the Cappel Concert Bureau, 1340 G Street.

A spot survey made of roughly a tenth of the deferred Federal employes—not including Army and Navy employes—revealed about 60 per cent held technical and scientific jobs. Less than a half of 1 per cent held white-collar administrative jobs and about 25 per cent were investigators of one kind or the other, G-Men, border patrolmen, police, firemen and the like . . . With a serious face, War Department officials say they're going to cut that 100,000 off the payroll that Undersecretary Patterson said would be reduced. They hint that from 4000 to 5000 here will be released. Best advice: wait and see. Meantime, the Ramspeck Committee is readying a report that'll burn war officials for telling so many different stories on their personnel needs . . . Something new, the Federal Diary of the Air will be heard tomorrow at 4:35 over WRC.

LETTER: "As an older clerk in the War Department, I read with great interest in your column that our 'absenteeism' is really very small. However, there is another thief that hurts efficiency and steals many useful hours away from work among our feminine employes. I mean the casualties of 'hurt feelings.' Seldom a day passes without encountering some girl in the corner indulging in a fit of tears. On inquiry it has never been because of real sorrow or distress to themselves or their families. The reply is usually the same, 'Someone found fault with me and spoke harshly, and my feelings are so hurt, boo-boo-boo!' I always have a desire to administer a spanking, either verbally or actually, in order to give them really something to cry about.

"These are busy overworked days for everyone, officers and clerks. If we aren't overworking we ought to be. We have no time to say 'pretty please' for every order, or to coat with sugar every time something is done wrong and needs correction. Men are dying every hour and enough tears have to be shed for real causes not to waste them on trifles. Hurt feelings are really a bad attack of selfishness . . . they are a luxury not to be indulged in any more than nylon stockings and new cars in wartime. Please put your feelings on ice for the duration and ration them carefully. WAR WIDOW."

Processes Own Call

Frederick, Md., July 9 (AP).—Chief Clerk Garland Z. Hightman of Frederick Draft Board No. 1 didn't even have to bother mailing one of the 33 notices of probable induction the board sent out this week. The name on the notice was Garland Z. Hightman.

10 Give Up Gas Units in Driving Ban

4 Other Cases Dismissed; Total Of 141 Ruled Upon In Three Weeks

Professed duck-watchers, Victory gardeners, relative visitors and prosaic picnickers last night at the sixth session of the special OPA continuance of the campaign panel board watched their gasoline coupons diminish in a modified against violators of the pleasure driving ban.

Sixteen cases were docketed but two of these charged failed to show up; In 10, penalties were assessed, four were dismissed and two withdrawn.

One hundred and forty-one cases have been heard by the panel since its advent three weeks ago. Normally 25 are heard each night the board is in session although last night's hearings were well below the average.

Kelley Cotton, 1802 Seventh Street Northwest, who parked near the duckpond at the Washington Zoo overlong, was penalized two A Coupons for violation of the pleasure-driving ban while Granville Boul, 2016 Monroe Street Northwest, who stopped for eight minutes at the same place to let his 3-year-old daughter see the ducks was given a clean slate.

Charges Withdrawn

Boul was returning from church July 4 and his most direct route home was through the park, it was brought out. Charges were withdrawn.

Lola Wilson, 2422 Nichols Avenue Southeast, who was going to visit her nephew and was handed a summons by a OPA investigator, appeared at the hearing with her A ration book pretty well chewed up and only three tickets left detached between the covers.

Asked by John C. Conliff, jr., acting chairman, about the matter, she said the book had been through the wash and that her daughter had attempted to "iron it out."

She was assessed one A coupon and ordered to return the book in to her local board for a new issue.

Raymond Lurba, a restaurant operator who lives at 4412 Edmonds Street Northwest, admitted to the board that he was taking some people to a picnic in his car. He was fined one A coupon and three weeks' supply of Bs.

Neighbor Assessed

Harry Posaloff, a neighbor, was on his way to visit a brother-in-law reported ill, had been asked to give Lurba a lift with the picnic crowd, according to the testimony. He admitted that he took several in his car.

He was assessed one A coupon and two weeks' issue of Bs.

Charles F. Freithaler, a baker who lives at 826 Twentieth Street, and who admitted using C tickets for driving a friend to her farm in Virginia to work in her Victory Garden, was forced to forfeit one A coupon when he is issued it on September 6, and his B book privileges revoked for two weeks.

Raymond Stuart, 1616 Belmont Road Northwest, and E. G. Goetz of 2700 Q Street Northwest, failed to show up at the scheduled hearing although both had been served summons.

Heavy Penalty

The former was penalized three A coupons and two months suspension of his B ration book. It was the most drastic penalty levied during the session.

Goetz was fined two A coupons.

F. J. Chapin, retired, who lives at 1803 Biltmore Street Northwest, who admitted driving into a side road near a country club and parking his car while he visited the club was fined one A coupon.

John B. Cook, 1610 Tenth Street Northwest, was fined two A coupons and Elizabeth D. Jones, 2800 Woodley Road, was forced to forfeit her B book containing six coupons.

In the case of Carlin Poland, Naval Hospital, fined three A coupons and given a six weeks suspension Thursday night, the board revoked its decision. Poland charges were withdrawn and the case dismissed.

Carlos Salzedo, bombastic Frenchman who has been acclaimed one of the world's greatest harpists, said on arrival here last night one of his pupils became such a good musician he had to marry her to remove his most formidable artistic rival.

Accompanied by Marjorie Call Salzedo, his beauteous wife who also plays the harp with the Salzedo Ensemble, the famed musician is here for the third of The Post's series of Starlight Concert at 8:30 p. m. tonight at idyllic Meridan Hill Park.

Also in the quartet are Ruth Freeman, flutist, a diminutive girl only four feet, ten inches tall, and Janos Scholz, cellist, who formerly played with the ensemble three years before organizing his own musical group.

Scholz to Play

Scholz will play in the place of Ana Drittell, who was scheduled for her first appearance tonight with the ensemble. She is unable to play because of illness.

A slight man who has a penchant for gay French ties, Salzedo said he likes to improvise during concerts because his wife acts somewhat like a backseat driver, "wondering what will come next and always surprised when I give a different twist to a composition."

Mrs. Salzedo, a native of Indianapolis, whose beauty as well as her talent has been praised by critics throughout the country, spoke up at this point: "I spend my life worrying about the lovely harp compositions that go to waste. My husband plays them on the stage but can't remember them when he gets home. He composes under the inspiration of the moment and then they're gone forever."

Began Studies at 9

The musician, who started harp lessons at 9 years, laughed last night when she confessed she had never seen a harp before that age but she suspected her father encouraged her study because he wanted "little daughter to be different from the rest of the girls in the neighborhood."

"I deserted my dolls when I began telling stories to my harp and kissing it goodnight," she reminisced.

Salzedo, a native of France with Spanish ancestors, made his first professional appearance as a pianist at the age of 5 years. He came to this country in 1917 as a protege of Gatti Casazza to fill the first harp desk of the Metropolitan Opera House. His father was a singer at the Paris Grand Opera and his mother a pianist for the Queen of Spain.

Expect More Pupils

Both harpists were much encouraged by the increased interest in harp music. They expect more pupils this year at their summer Harp Colony of America at Camden, Me., than any year since it was started in 1931. One reason for the turn to harp music by talented young musicians is the limited opportunity in "the overcrowded piano field."

The varied program tonight will include compositions by Handel, Rameau, Faure, von Gluck and Debussy. Carlos Salzedo will play his own "Scintillation" as a harp solo. The ensemble also will give a concert tomorrow night at the same hour at Meridian Hill Park.

Wallace Talks At Meeting of Handicapped

Speaking before the American Federation of Physically Handicapped last night Vice President Henry A. Wallace said "that the American people have the greatest admiration for those who have used their physical handicaps to broaden their minds, intensify their wills, and to vivify their sympathies."

"But if the American people reserve their sympathies and admiration for those who exchange their physical handicaps to enhance the mind, then also the American people reserve their supreme disdain for those who have used their abounding health and great wealth to narrow their minds and to contract their sympathies.

"The American people in this particular period have used their minds to overcome handicaps and live with abundance. Those who are more fortunate than you can borrow from you more spiritual resources to help them live with abundance.

"Ten million men have skills they didn't have before. The abundance is here. It can be used to carry out debt if we will do it with the same determination that you as individuals and a group have worked in overcoming your particular handicaps."

Representative Kelley (Democrat) of Pennsylvania spoke on his resolution which would authorize a congressional investigation of ways and means of utilizing the manpower available through proper employment of persons with physical handicaps.

A resolution was adopted to petition Congress to pass the Kelley resolution.

Other speakers were: Paul A. Struchan, president of the federation; Lewis Hines, representing President William Green of the American Federation of Labor, and Monroe Sweetland, director of the C. I. O. War Relief Commission. The meeting was held in the Press Club Auditorium.

Watergate Bill Postponed Until Tonight

The Watergate concert by the National Symphony Orchestra, scheduled for last night was postponed until tonight at 8:30 o'clock on account of the weather.

The program will feature Percy Grainger, pianist, and Stanley Chapple, guest conductor.

Owing to the closing of Kitt's music store today, tickets for tonight's and Sunday's concerts will be on sale at the Watergate office after 1 p. m. today.

Youth Wounded, Policeman Injured In Woman's Arrest

An 18-year-old Negro suffered a serious gunshot wound last night and a Second Precinct policeman suffered a minor knife wound of the face when the man attempted to interfere in the arrest of a woman at 800 O Street Northwest.

The wounded youth was taken to Freedman's Hospital with a pistol wound of the groin. Slashed was Pvt. P. B. Garlick, 28, of 2615 South Wayne Street Arlington, Va., who was treated for face wounds.

Involved in the melee also was a 21-year-old youth who is being held at the Second Precinct Station.

The officer said he had gone to the address to arrest a woman on a warrant charging assault when the attack occurred.

Two Sentenced, One Arraigned For Wearing Service Uniforms

Seaman Pleads Guilty In Appearing Before U. S. Commissioner

On the eve of his wedding to a Government employe, Vincent E. Burke, 25, was charged by the FBI yesterday with illegally wearing the uniform and insignia of a lieutenant in the U. S. Maritime Service and with impersonating a Federal officer.

Burke, an able-bodied seaman by trade, pleaded not guilty when arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Needham C. Turnage and was released under $3000 bond.

According to FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover, Burke was arrested after he had passed a bogus check by identifying himself as an officer. The FBI claimed that Burke spent between $800 and $900 on whiskey in Washington within the past month. His financee was convinced he was a lieutenant, it was said.

Burke previously had been held under a similar charge in Newark, N. J., but was released on June 2, when he promised that he would return to duty as a seaman, the FBI said.

Burke, an FBI spokesman said, served a four-year enlistment in the Navy, being discharged for bad conduct in 1940. He was said to have made two trips overseas since then on an oil tanker and to have returned to the United States the day before he was arrested on the uniform charge in Newark.

Man Masquerading As Captain, Woman As Nurse Get Terms

Military masquerades ended for two persons yesterday as both were sentenced in Municipal Court to serve prison terms.

One was Benjamin Shenker, 30, food market manager who illegally donned an Army captain's uniform. The other, Luella B. Cushing, 30, who wore an Army Nurse Corps uniform and lived without funds at the Statler Hotel.

Shenker, alias Major Van Shenker, who wore an apron by day but was a soldier with the Order of the Purple Heart at night, broke down in court and pleaded for mercy for the sake of his wife and unborn child, saying: "Believe me, judge, you don't know how I've suffered."

Judge Nathan Margold, who had learned from Assistant U. S. Attorney Sylvan Schwartz that bigamy and perjury charges against Shenker had been placed before the grand jury, replied, "She isn't your wife and when your son is born, he will be illegitimate. I sentence you to serve nine months."

This was a term of three months each on three separate charges.

Miss Cushing asked for another chance to go straight after Assistant U. S. Attorney John Diamond said that she had been disgracing the uniform. Judge George Neilson, who sentenced her to serve six months and to pay a fine of $250, said "Let others ponder your unhappy plight before entering your course," and added that the offense was particularly intolerable in war time.

Salvage Chairman Commended For Leadership in D. C. Drive

James E. Colliflower, chairman of the District Salvage Committee, was cited by the War Production Board yesterday for his leadership of the Washington Salvage Campaign.

The commendations by WPB Chief Donald Nelson for "patriotic efforts in the National Salvage campaign" was delivered to Colliflower by District Commissioner John Russell Young at the District Building. W. R. Talbot, head of the WPB general salvage division represented Nelson at the ceremony.

In the year and a half that Colliflower has headed the local salvage committee, 271,710,760 pounds of various kinds of primary scrap materials have been gathered in Washington, the chairman reported to Young. Of this, 192,634,000 were salvaged in 1942, and 79,076,000 in that first six months of 1943.

Swim Classes Open

Trade Board Plans Study Of Harbors

Water Front's Future Outlined, Channel Needs Discussed As Postwar Venture

Five committees of the transportation section of the Washington Board of Trade, Metropolitan Club, yesterday outlined postwar plans for channel, harbor and port improvements, pollution correction and flats reclamation.

"We consider it highly important," said John A. Remon for the river and harbors committee, "from the standpoint of postwar planning to develop exact specifications to utilize postwar opportunities immediately and thus will avoid what otherwise would be a period of construction inactivity while plans are hastily, and frequently under such circumstances, poorly drawn."

Among the plans, curtailed now because of the war, to be carried to completion as soon as possible are: The Washington Channel improvements, port development, harbor regulations, river pollution, Anacostia area reclamation, removal of the old aqueduct bridge abutments, and dredging of the Georgetown Channel mud flats.

The chairman of the five committees, comprising the transportation section, under the general chairmanship of H. L. Rust, jr., meeting yesterday were P. Y. K. Howat for the traffic committee, Charles M. Upham for the highways committee, E. F. Lacey for the public utilities and transportation committee, William P. MacCracken, jr., for the aviation committee, and John A. Remon for the rivers and harbors committee.

The rivers and harbors committee announced immediate need for proceeding with plans for a fundamental survey of the entire water and waterfront area in the District of Columbia.

Child, 2, Killed While Playing In Toy Auto

Allowed to play with his older brother's pedal auto as a birthday concession, 2-year-old James Michael Kennedy yesterday was strangled when his head became caught between the steering wheel and the rim of the auto at his home, 6439 Brooks Lane, Brookmont, Md. He was the son of Third Mate John G. Kennedy of the U. S. Merchant Marine and Mrs. Kennedy.

The child's mother looked out the window and saw James with his head under the rim but paid little attention, believing him to be playing. When she called him and he did not answer, she investigated and found he was unconscious.

The young mother carried the child to the home of a neighbor, Mrs. Claude B. Martin, who gave artificial respiration while they were waiting for the Glen Echo Rescue Squad. The squad used a resuscitator without avail and took the boy to Georgetown Hospital, where he was pronounced dead.

The father is believed at sea but his whereabouts were shrouded in wartime secrecy. A telegram telling of the death has been forwarded to the postmaster at New Work for transmission.

In celebration of James' birthday, his 3-year-old brother, John, had agreed that he could play with the pedamobile yesterday afternoon but the brother had gone into another yard to play with friends.

The family has resided at Brookmont for about a year and originally came from Baltimore.

11 More Casualties Announced by Navy

The Navy announced yesterday 11 casualties, 3 dead, 1 wounded and 7 missing. In addition 8 names are listed whose status has changed from prisoner to dead and 1 from missing to dead.

This brings to 27,066 the total of Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard casualties reported to next of kin since December 7, 1941. The grand total includes 8232 dead, 4736 wounded, 10,513 missing, and 3585 prisoners of war.

Tall Corn Growing in Wallace Plot

By Mary Spargo
Post Staff Writer

Take it from a totally unauthorized source, as removed from Government insiders as Timbuktu, the Vice President's back-yard "farm" is actually sprouting.

The "mysterious source" who has no connection with government is identified at the end of this article and is quoted directly.

Best Corn in Capital

"You want to talk corn in the summer. Well believe this or not, it's quite immaterial to me. Congress has gone home and I won't be berated on the floor or called before a congressional committee.

"The V. P. has the best corn in Washington right here, and that's going some. In fact it's the best on the continent. Henry gets right out here at 7 o'clock every morning and works.

"Look at it! This corn is 8 feet high and will reach 15 feet.

"Variety? Oh, this is Bolivian corn. The V. P. likes South America pretty well. There's been rumors—but I've been told not to peddle rumors. I have an important job here—without me the garden would be ruined—and I've been told not to chatter.

"Naturally, I could tell a lot if I would. For instance now, wouldn't you like to know what the V. P. mutters when he has a specially hard row to hoe?

Hoe Went to China

"Jesse Jones? Well, you're some guesser. Say, I've seen him practically send that hoe clear through to China, and I always think Hank—pardon the familiarity but I know him well—the Vice President is thinking of that—that—well banker again.

"Yes, indeed, he's developed his own corn. No corn, not globaloney, hybrid corn. First man in the country to do it.

"Milkweed?" No, we don't have milkweed in this garden. You aren't ribbing me, are you?

"See that row of tomatoes over there getting kind of pretty, except they don't have enough bugs on them.

"Well one day I kind of murmured 'quinine' under my breath when Hank was in the garden and say—I just wish you'd seen the V. P. He was just about as red as that tomato over there—the real red one.

"Oh, sure, they get all the vegetables out of here. Gosh, there's no worrying about price ceilings on fresh vegetables at this legation, I'll tell you that.

No Pigs There—Yet

"Pigs—oh, we don't keep pigs here. Gosh, Hank just got through burying some, didn't he?

"Those cabbages? Oh, sure. Real solid thick heads. Yes, indeed. One day I was right beside one of those cabbages and Henry he had the morning paper in his pocket. He takes a look at it and he says 'cabbage head.' No, that's all he says.

"Peas and beans? Oh, sure. No, they don't put them in a stockpile.

"Bugs? Not enough of them. That's my job and I'm supposed to get about 10,000 in a summer. I think the OPA must be rationing them around here.

"My name and address? Just write me here in care of the Swiss Legation.

"I'll tell you, I was christened Bufo Americanus, but most folks just call me Toad. Hank, he calls me 'Butch'."

Approval Of Treide Expected

Werts to Fill Job To Keep WMC Setup In Region Intact, Ready for Service

Leo P. Werts, acting director of the War Manpower Commission, said yesterday he will immediately go ahead toward making three additional temporary WMC appointments permanent under a recent ruling.

Werts made the statement, after for seeing prompt action on the appointment of Henry E. Treide, Baltimore, as WMC regional director by the Civil Service Commission.

Treide's appointment had been confirmed by the Senate Thursday but the action was reconsidered and revoked when it was called to the Senate's attention that high salaried WMC jobs no longer called for its confirmation.

Thus the Civil Service Commission becomes the group to pass on WMC appointments in the higher brackets identically as it does other Government jobs.

Salary Fixed at $8000

Since last October high-salaried WMC appointments have required Senate confirmation due to the wording of the deficiency appropriation law. This law expired with the fiscal year on June 30, and since Senator McKellar's (Democrat) of Tennessee measure to require confirmation of all persons in Government employ receiving more than $4500 annually was not passed, Senate action now is unnecessary.

Treide's salary, should the Civil Service Commission act favorably upon his appointment, will be $8000 a year.

Upward to 300 places in the National manpower setup were formerly affected by the deficiency appropriation law, requiring Senate conformation.

One hundred and sixty of the these jobs, since last October, had already been confirmed and made permanent, leaving approximately 100 brass hat positions on a tentative basis, or in some instances vacant. Four of these, excluding the director's, are in Region 4 of the WMC which embraces the District of Columbia, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and North Carolina.

Various Jobs Listed

Jobs and temporary officials in the region:

District of Columbia area director, Fred Z. Hetzel.

Field director for West Virginia, Walter M. Given, USES.

Regional chief of training, vacant.

The position of A. L. Shoenthal, regional deputy director in charge of field operations for the WMC, is technically tentative; however Shoenthal is a Civil Service "trainee" and is qualified for permanent assignment when he has served sufficient time.

The place, temporarily filled by Fred W. Hetzel as District WMC area director, is expected to be filled at once following the decision of the area Management-Labor Committee which was in session yesterday.

Recommendation for the job will be made to Acting Director Werts by the entire committee. The place was vacated recently by the resignation of Ramy P. Deschner, who took leave from the WMC six weeks ago.

Hetzel has been acting director since that time.

Treide, at present WMC deputy State director for Maryland was formerly president of the Davison Chemical Co. in Baltimore and president of the Baltimore Museum of Arts. He received an award from the Baltimore Advertising Club in 1939 for "outstanding contributions to civic advancement."

He became a partner in the firm of Treide & Sons after graduating from Johns Hopkins University. Experience gained in business in connection with foreign trade and international financing led to his selection as one of the organizers of the Baltimore Mail Steamship Co. of which he was vice president and a director.

In 1937, Treide, a veteran of World War I, was named a member of the board of the Peabody Institute. He served at one time as president of the Baltimore Association of Credit Men.

City News in Brief

His name struck a familiar note in the mind of Station Clerk Charles Yates.

"Do you have a brother named Charlie?" Yates inquired.

"Stick around," Yates remarked. "You'll probably see him."

And within less than two hours, Charles Gillette, 48, was escorted into the station and charged with being drunk.

The policemen were nice about it, too. They gave the brothers a cell to themselves.

Theosophical Lecture

Colby Dorr Dam, psychologist, lecturer and economist, will speak on "The Human Spirit Can Win the Peace" at Theosophic Hall, 1216 H Street Northwest, at 8 p. m. tomorrow, James W. McGuire, president of the Theosophical Society District Lodge, announced yesterday.

Historian to Lecture

"Behind the Fighting Fronts of Washington—1861-65" is the title of a lecture to be given by Stanley W. McClure, National Capital Parks Historian, tonight at 8:30 o'clock in Rock Creek Park campfire site, near Sixteenth Street and Colorado Avenue Northwest.

Judgment Sustained

A District Court joudgment which awarded $1750 to William R. Harrison, 46, of 5118 Cathedral Avenue Northwest, for a sprained ankle he suffered in September, 1940, in the Hecht Co., was sustained yesterday by the United States Court of Appeals.

Pretzfelder Cited

A citation for merit in civilian defense activities was awarded Leon Pretzfelder, inspector of the Civilian Defense Services, the Committee on Citations and Awards announced last night.

Chapel to Be Blessed At Mass Tomorrow

The new chapel of the Annunciation Mission of St. Ann's Parish, Thirty-ninth Street and Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, will be formally blessed at 8 o'clock mass tomorrow morning by the Most Rev. John M. McNamara, Auxiliary Bishop of Washington and Baltimore and pastor of St. Gabriel's Church here.

Bishop McNamara will be celebrant at the mass. Other masses will be said at 10 a. m., 11 a. m. and 12:15 p. m.

Susie's Persian Topper

By Ruth Gregory

Scene: Same as Thursday (almost any place furs are sold.) Characters: Salesman, Susie Junior, Mrs. Arounforty.

SUSIE: (to salesman, not noticing Mrs. Arounforty on settee) I'm looking for a Persian lamb topper . . .

SALESMAN: I'll be with you directly . . . won't you sit down?

SUSIE: (to Mrs. Arounforty) Sorry, I didn't see you . . .

MRS. AROUNFORTY: That's all right—as a matter of fact, you're looking for the same thing I am.

SUSIE: (surveying Mrs. A.'s ample lines with alarm) Oh?

SALESMAN: (carrying Persian topper) This is the 36" length I told you about.

MRS AROUNFORTY: (slips it on) Do you think I can wear this length? I have to be careful, you know, with my figure . . .

SALESMAN: Of course. The fine thing about these "short long" coats is that they're good on most any shape or size. I certainly wouldn't advise a short coat for you, but this length has a really slimming effect.

MRS. AROUNFORTY: (looking at herself) I think you're right—it does seem to give me a leaner look . . . What do you thinks? (to Susie).

SUSIE: (dryly) I wouldn't know.

SALESMAN: Here, let me turn those cuffs back for you. . .

MRS. AROUNFORTY: Does this collar fasten over?

SALESMAN: Yes (he fastens it, giving the topper a kind of Chinese air with slight collar standing up around Mrs. A.'s neck).

MRS. AROUNFORTY: Dear me, I feel all dressed up!

SALESMAN: That's the point—you can feel dressed in this coat . . . or casual. You can wear it over suits, over dresses . . .

MRS. AROUNFORTY: (deciding) It's my coat! Doesn't it just look like it belongs to me, dear? (to Susie).

SUSIE: (grudgingly) Uh-huh . . .

(Mrs. A. and the salesman go off . . . Salesman returns).

SALESMAN: would you like to see the same style in your size?

SUSIE: Well, I did want a Persian and I did want a topper—but I don't know . . . I don't think I want a Persian now . . . so many older women seem to go for them. I don't want an older woman's coat!

SALESMAN: But Persian isn't an older woman's coat . . . funny I've heard that before. It's the styling that determines whether it's a mature or youthful coat—not the fur . . .

SUSIE: (persisting) Why do so many older women like it?

SALESMAN: Lots of reasons—one thing, since as a rule older women are larger, is that it's not a bulky fur—it's flat, short-haired. Can you imagine Mrs. Arounforty in a beaver, say? Persion is a handsome fur and very durable. Supposing I show you a topper a little more your size?

SUSIE: Well, all right.

SALESMAN: (returning with the Persian topper sketched) . . . Now, let's put this on you before you say anything more about "older women's fur" . . . This coat is designed for a misses' figure. Looks a little different, doesn't it?

SUSIE: (shifting one lapel across the other) Right! This is perfect length for me. Is this coat very expensive?

SALESMAN: $495.

SUSIE: Ouch!

SALESMAN: If you like this style, you know, we can have made up for you from other pelts of your own choosing—or more, or less . . .

SUSIE: Not more, please! It's a good idea . . . Can I see the samples in less expensive skins?

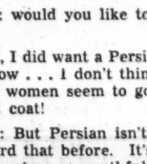
Safe Uses of Ladder for Women

More and more women are today finding themselves the "handy man" of the house. More and more doctors are being drawn daily into the armed services. Put these two facts together and suggestions offered by the United States Department of Labor for guarding against accidents are particularly timely.



Ladders offer several hazards to a woman unaccustomed to using them. Yet ladders must be used if she's putting up the awnings herself this summer, touching up the paint here and there, or even taking down winter curtains and putting up summer ones.

Here are the five points emphasized in the safe use of ladders.

1. Do not leave tools or other heavy articles on top of a stepladder from which they may fall.
2. In using ordinary rung ladders, place them only against solid and stationary backgrounds.
3. The foot of the ladder should be one-fourth of the ladder's length away from the wall against which it is leaning.
4. When ascending or descending a ladder, always face it and use both hands.
5. Use only ladders in good repair. Never use one with missing or broken rungs or steps.

THE GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay

What Is an American?

Poets, historians, scientists are busy these days appraising the American character. What do they find? As a people, do we measure up to what our Fourth of July orators say of us? Or would a psychiatrist view us with a suspicious eye?

In general the verdict seems good. Our strengths outweigh our weaknesses—as yet. But ahead lies their most severe testing.

What do we have on the credit side? A great resourcefulness for one thing. It is strange how many of the appraisers stress it. Especially is it manifested when meeting the challenge of obstacles, as overcoming nature or fighting wars. It is particularly evident in the heroes of F. van Wyck Mason's "The Fighting American," an anthology of war stories designed to show "how the American acts in battle." It is also evident in the great material civilization built on this continent.

Always Hopeful Of 'Tomorrow'

Aldous Huxley finds hopefulness one of the most dominant characteristics of Americans. Strangely, he came to that conclusion after a cross-country motor tour at the time of the depression. This "extraordinary hopefulness," he felt, was the chief quality that distinguished this country from Europe, where even before the war there was "hopeless depression and fear."

Initiative also is often named as an American strong point of character—an initiative which is the logical descendent of the daring adventurous spirit of those who settled this continent and later conquered it. Also bequeathed to us from those first settlers was endurance and an indomitable faith in the future, as Stephen Vincent Benet shows in his "Western Star," a poetic study of this country's beginnings.

Vitality, energy, ambition, inventiveness, restlessness, — perhaps all these frequently mentioned traits are covered by those already listed. There is also the American sense of personal dignity, our unawareness of having any "betters"—at least none to whose position we cannot climb.

Margaret Mead in her study of Americans from the viewpoint of an anthropologist, "And Keep Your Powder Dry," finds us a people geared to success and movement, invigorated by obstacles, possessed of a feeling that we must keep ever onward and upward, and suffering guilt and despair when we fail to do so, a people unwarlike but able and resourceful in battle when it comes and always doing our best when we are moved by a moral purpose, when we feel that right is on our side.

Americans Also Have Their Faults

All of this would seem to add up to something to make us throw out our chests. But what of the debit side? Well, here at least no one as yet has come forward to diagnose us as suffering from the paranoia Dr. R. M. Brickner sees in the German people in his recent "Is Germany Incurable?" Moreover, we have generally dropped our boast about one American's being able to lick 10 foreigners. Nevertheless our attitudes toward those of other nationalities, races, colors and creeds could well make us at time material for psychopathic investigation. With all our friendliness and generosity we yet must wrestle constantly with the devils of intolerance, tightmindedness and provinciality. And our restlessness and ambition often cause us to do things shoddily as well as easily, to be impatient of detail and thoroughness, and to put a premium on mediocrity. Even in the name of democracy we glorify ignorance, halt progress and despoil beauty.

But what of the final balance? That depends on how we use the great strengths we have been given. For if not used they atrophy and we become a decadent Nation. We have always used them successfully when we had anything tangible to use them on. We are using them now—successfully—in winning a war. But after that? Can we translate our resourcefulness in battle, our initiative and daring in industry, our great will to personal achievement into social tools for realizing the peace, freedom and security mankind must have in order to survive? Will we continue resourceful, daring, intrepid and indominatably hopeful in meeting the intangible and seeming unsolvable problems of peace? Even though we should fail of the idealistic goals we set ourselves, the important thing is that we try. Otherwise we will not be Americans.

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

If you like to see eager faces at your dinner table set such a chicken-dumpling dish before your family. Compliments will not be lacking either. If you can't find meat, you will never miss it if you cook this delightful combination

Martha Ellyn

The potato is a vegetable that wouldn't be downed for long. From potato famine to potato abundance in a few weeks is its wartime record. Of course some persons didn't mind its absence because they thought it was no aid to stream-lined figures. But at the same time they didn't figure that besides the calories it contained, there is also tucked beneath its skin calcium, protein, phosphorous, iron, thiamine, riboflavin and vitamin C.

So many sterling qualities grouped under one skin would surely bring the potato to the table without hesitancy. It will also be making its appearance often since it is one of the vegetables we are able to buy that is not sky-high in price and wilted to a dejected state.

The British who are vitamin-short are serving potatoes three times a day. It is said that they know 198 different ways to prepare them. I don't know if potato dumplings is one of the ways they cook them or not, but anyway it is one way to vary the traditional chicken and mashed potatoes. Incidentally with meat being a difficult food to obtain, why not catch yourself a chicken and try these dumplings. Here is a suggested menu:

Dinner Menu

Chicken Potato Dumplings
Fresh Peas
Carrot-Cabbage Salad
Enriched Bread Butter
Iced Cantaloupe Tea

You can serve these dumplings with either fried or stewed chicken. Here is the recipe for making them:

POTATO DUMPLINGS

Combine 2 cups grated raw potatoes, 2 eggs, well beaten, ¾ cup flour, (approximate) and 1 teaspoon salt. Drop from spoon into boiling salted water or boiling chicken broth. Cover tightly and steam 12 minutes. Yield: 12 egg-size dumplings. The proportion of flour may be adjusted according to the moisture content of the potatoes. The mixture should be stiff enough to drop from a spoon.

Nation's Airlines Now Offer Interesting Jobs for Women

By Genevieve Reynolds

The long hand of World War II has reached into the man-manned airports and airlines of the country and opened up many interesting jobs for girls and women. Now you will find girls serving in communications and operations branches as well as glamorous stewardess jobs. Also, you will see them in flight service, maintenance and reservations.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

But let's consider the girl at the ticket window. First, you notice that they are attractive in appearance, well-groomed and often pretty. That isn't all; they must have a pleasing personality; be diplomatic in handling passengers—be it a movie star, a general, a high-ranking Government official or just plain John Doe.

Before she lands the job, the airline company gives her an intensive six-week taining course. American Airlines for example, sends the trainees to their school in New York City. There she is given an outline of the airline's business, drilled in operations and safety talks. In addition she learns all about the reservation angles, weather conditions, etc. A knowledge of travel priorities is a must.

Twice a month the American Airlines sends a member of its personnel office to Washington to interview applicants for all types of positions. Next visit on the schedule is Wednesday, 9 a. m. to 6 p. m., with a follow-up on July 28. Usually the company hires its personnel a month or two before putting them to work.

Ninety per cent of the girls who work in the reservation or ticket sections have college backgrounds. Preferred ages are 21 to 28—but will go over the maximum but not under the minimum age. Starting salary is $125 for the first six months and $150 the next. A supervisory assignment will net you from $10 to $40 a month more than the regular salary.

For advancement, the airline officials consider this a good niche for girls. From the reservation and ticket counter the employes easily enter other phases of the work.

In the operations branch, also where there are openings for women—duties consist of computing loads for load agents; then gathering and handling of weather data, cargo information. Still others handle air traffic control; transmit radio information to pilots.

If you enjoy meeting the planes when they arrive you can serve as a ramp agent. Your duties consist of signaling the plane in, assisting the stewardess and others on the field operations.

In the communications division, women teletypists and radio operators are needed. Among the miscellaneous job openings for women in the airline fields are those of servicing the plane with food, dispatch handling, assisting with the loading of mail on the plane; carrying the mail and baggage to the plane on small tractors.

Requirements are high and exacting for stewardess. A minimum of two years college training is necessary. Then you must be between 21 and 28 years of age, unmarried, weigh not more than 125 pounds; not exceed 5 feet 6 inches in height; eyesight not requiring glasses all the time. Besides all this to pass the tests you must be clear thinking, possess a desire to please. Above all you must be tactful and diplomatic and skillful in rendering services to others. Furthermore, you must be willing to go anywhere the company may want to send you. Hours are short—do not exceed eight, seldom more than five.

Vacations with pay are given to all employes. Furthermore, you have the opportunity to fly, mileage depends upon length of service. In normal times, your mother, father, sister or husband has the same privileges of free transportation. In addition, the company provides special retirement funds, insurance and hospitalization.

While the jobs might not pay as much as Government salaries in some instances—at least you have exciting, stimulating work with chances of permanency and advancement.

Memo To— Miss Brown

SUBJECT:

Farmer Green's Beans

You've surely heard by this time the beautiful story of the Maryland bean harvest—apparently doomed by lack of willing hands, then saved at the bell, practically, by volunteer workers. You may have given a few cheers for the hard-working volunteers without realizing that they're having themselves a great deal of fun in the process of being helpful. And, 10 to 1, you didn't know that you too can join in the whole thing.

The local office of the American Women's Voluntary Services is currently recruiting for Camp Mil-bur (formerly a boys' camp) which the extension service of the Department of Agriculture is operating on the Magathy River near Gibson Island, Maryland. The camp is set up as a combination work and fun organization for girls who can spend a week or more at farming. Board and room at the camp cost $1.25 a day (and the food is good old country style—lots of it). The campers work five of the seven days they spend at camp and can earn as much as $5 a day—on the basis of pounds picked—so even a city slicker such as you should more than break even financially.

And Fun, Too

There's a recreation adviser at the camp to lead such sport as swimming, tennis, badminton, singing and whatever you like on the two "off" days and in the evenings. The bugle blows at no less than 5 a. m. (think what that should do for your lagging spirits!) leaving plenty of time for showers and breakfast—the latter consisting of fruit, oatmeal, eggs, toast and coffee. Farmer Green (or whoever the boss for the day may be) calls for his "hands" in a truck at 7 a. m. The work day is usually over at 4 or 5 p. m., leaving time for a swim before supper.

Although the bean crop is the current matter of interest (one of the Government Girl campers even composed a song entitled "I've Been Workin' on the Bean Patch") the A. W. V. S. is recruiting workers to handle the tomatoes and other crops. The camp will be in operation until Labor Day and, incidentally, has lured every sort of person imaginable—including office workers, school teachers, students, society gals and even a few Senators' daughters.

The Apple Pickers

Come September, the Extension Service will open another camp at Hancock, Md., along the same general lines, but intended to help out with the coming apple crop. So even if your precious six days come late in the season you can still devote them to bucolic pleasures.

Call the A. W. V. S. office (DU. 1476) any day between 9 and 5 or Friday evenings between 7 and 9 to make arrangements to go to camp—and you'll have a good, old-fashioned (and victory-conscious) vacation to look forward to.

If you like your outdoor life in smaller snatches, the Sunday volunteer program is your meat. Groups of men and women (mostly men, it seems, at the moment) are currently going out to surrounding farms haying of a Sunday. It's for the men to do the pitching (of hay of course) while the gals drive the team of horses. Wages are the standard farmhand ones for the type of work done—and there are some farmers who welcome after-work swimming parties in the old swimmin' hole. Volunteers go to work in groups, via trucks, and are brought safely back to Washington Sunday evening. So plan to get your summer tan the useful way!

You may apply for Sunday goings-on by calling the A. W. V. S. office also—same time, same telephone number.

Incidentally, if you've no notion of what this farming business is all about, you can learn a great deal by listening to the instructions which all of the farmers dish out.

SHOP AND RUN

By Marianne

"Stay at Home and Like It."

No gas. Crowded streetcars. No money. Well. Let's stay at home! In olden days the crowd amused themselves in the parlor with a good old-fashioned stereoscope; so can we with this 1943 version of a stereoscope in plastic so light baby could hold it.

It's one of the nicest conversation pieces we've seen yet. Instead of one picture you have 14 in a roll of film. With a flick of the finger you turn to the next picture. Of course the magic of a stereoscope is that you view pictures in the third dimension. Since these have writing, too, you have silent movies PLUS.

This company has made 349 different films—including everything from the Battlefield of Gettysburg to Sally Rand's Bubble Dance. There are films of foreign countries (if you've traveled you can take your friends on a tour; if you haven't then here's a way to acquire an intelligent look).

There are also many films for the kids—be forewarned, they'll monopolize the stereoscope! There's real entertainment for them from comic stars to fairy tales.

The stereoscope is $1.00 and films are three for $1.00, or 35c each. You can also get a library case of inlaid wood, containing stereoscope and 12 films for only $5.25.

A Jig-Saw Puzzle of YOU

Here's a new slant. In this case you cut your picture up and send it to your dearest friend! It's like this. You can take your favorite negative or print to this store and they'll enlarge it to 7 by 9¼ inches and make a jigsaw puzzle out of it. They'll put it in an attractive box for you and you can send it to a friend in the service or the folks back home—not assembled, of course. After they've put the 60 pieces of you together they can paste the puzzle on a sheet of paper for a more permanent remembrance. $1.00.

Call NAtional 4200, Extension 324, between 9 and 5:30 and we'll tell you where to find these.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

It never was any cinch to run a career and a house, too. And now all the complications make it a nightmare. If you cook only for two, and never seem to have enough ration points for a decent piece of meat, or get there too late to get it anyway, you may be tempted to give up and eat out.

But a little system will go a long way toward making it possible for you to have your meals at home. Sit down and plan your menus for a week ahead and phone your order for a good portion of the foods you will need instead of having to trudge to the store for them after work. It is a bit more expensive to have groceries delivered but it saves wear and tear on you. There's a limit to your energy as well as your budget.

Market for oranges, apples over the weekend, vegetables when you have time off. It makes your market list less complicated to buy your pound of butter and pound of yellow cheese every two weeks. By the way, don't pass up the yellow cheese. It can be used in the menus in a variety of ways.

Allocate enough stamps for salad oil so that you can keep a large jar of dressing already made up in the ice box. And try to keep the makings of a crisp green salad in the vegetable container. You don't always have the time to give spinach its regulation seven washings but you can toss a salad together and get your greens that way. Vary the salad with cheese balls and carrot sticks, or add chopped nuts to it, or mix in slices of tart raw apple, peeling on.

Look into the new, prepared soup mixes. All you have to do to them is add a little milk and you have a nutritious course of no ration points. Milk is something you should always try to keep in the ice box to drink or cook with.

You will find it makes cooking easier to use the packaged specialties—corn meal mix for muffins, and gingerbread and biscuit preparations. Stir in the milk, and you're set for home baking.

You may like to buy meat for two or three days and reserve one tray of the refrigerator for keeping it. When you have a piece of ham in the compartment, it is easy to come home and fry the ham, open a can of rationed tomatoes, toss a green salad together, stir up corn muffins, and, with milk and fresh fruit for dessert you have a good meal on the table in no time at all.

With no meat on hand, cheese is a menu-saver. Nothing is easier to prepare than a grilled cheese sandwich—just put bits of cheese on slices of bread and leave under the flame until the cheese melts. Of course, a strip of bacon adds to the flavor. With it serve a watercress and tomato salad, hot tea, and molasses cookies and spiced applesauce. Who could ask for a better supper? When you plan a meal of that kind, however, you and your husband should have your meat and vegetables at noon.

If you really like to cook, you might do some advance cooking over the weekend. When you have time to cook a meat loaf, small roast or chicken that will give you a reserve for Monday and Tuesday. To really give yourself a break, eat dinner out at least once a week. You don't want always to be in the kitchen.

You find you are having to spend more for food these days, but don't skimp on nutrition. It's the right food that gives you the extra energy you need.

Gen. Giraud Greets Capital Notables At Largest Reception This Season

Fete Takes Place In Grand Ballroom Of Shoreham Hotel

By Elizabeth Henney

They may still be at dagger's points in North Africa and their own native land, but Frenchmen in Washington achieved unity (perhaps for the first time) yesterday when the whole French colony, Giraudists, De Gaullists, and what else have you, turned out to attend the reception at the Shoreham Hotel given by the cochairman of the French Committee for National Liberation, Gen. Henri Honore Giraud.

Outstanding in many ways, yesterday's crush event (for there seemed to be at least half of Washington either in the ballroom or struggling to get in) was an amazing "First." It was the first time for special instance that a visiting "missionist" has been host at a party in honor of himself.

Of course there may have been many reasons for that. In the first place France has no embassy nor legation to represent her officially here at the moment. And then again, it might have been a gesture made by the astute Gen. Giraud to bring all of the colonists together by inviting them personally rather than to have the event given through an official representative of any kind.

Thousands Invited And They Came

Be that as it may, invitations went out to thousands and were accepted with alacrity. In fact, so large was the crowd that aides of General Giraud, becoming alarmed and fearing the crush might get out of hand, appealed to one of the United States Army public relations officers, who was assisting. They asked him if he couldn't please stop the line and not let in any more people. His reply was "After all, you invited them. Now you have to let them come in."

The general himself, in the meantime, greeting guests with a handshake and gallantly kissing the hands of the ladies (at least for the first half hour or more of the party) didn't seem a bit perturbed by the number of guests who came to pay their respects.

Though the official hour of the party was from 5:30 to 6:30 o'clock, guests began arriving long before the hour and well after 7 o'clock were streaming down the long corridor and winding stairs into the ballroom, though the host himself left promptly on the dot of 6:30.

And, after all, he was to be excused for that, because he was expected shortly thereafter for dinner at the White House, where he and President Roosevelt no doubt continued their discussions of the problems of welding all the French into a unit against the Axis.

Celebrity Hunters Miss Marshall

Celebrity hunters, eager to see who was there, kept inquiring about United States Chief of Staff Gen. George C. Marshall and Mrs. Marshall. Mrs. Marshall is out of town for a week or so, and if General Marshall did put in an appearance at all during the afternoon it was brief and unheralded, though it is probable that he did not.

Having entertained at an elaborate dinner in honor of General Giraud on Tuesday evening at the Mayflower, General Marshall has already established amicable relations there, and since he attended the White House dinner that evening, it is possible he thought it better not to take that time from the job.

Vice Admiral Edwards Heads Uniformed Group

Commander in Chief of the United States Fleet and Chief of Naval Operations Admiral Ernest J. King also was looked for in vain. He too attended the White House dinner later. Conspicuously there, however, was Vice Admiral Richard S. Edwards, Admiral King's chief of staff.

Others among the uniformed and gold-braided group were Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, head of the Maritime Commission; Capt. Leland P. Lovette, director of Public Relations of the Navy; Gen. Henry H. Arnold, commanding general of the Army Air Forces; Gen. Leslie J. McNair, commanding general of the Army Ground Forces; head of the Selective Service, Maj. Gen. Lewis P. Hershey; chief of Army Public Relations, Maj. Gen. Alexander Day Surles; Col. and Mrs. Ernest Dupuy and seemingly thousands more.

Considerable stir was caused by the arrival of the British Ambassador and Lady Halifax, though on counting noses most of the diplomatic corps seemed to be represented, including the envoys and military and naval attaches of all the United Nations.

Mme. Tixier, Full French Group Attend

Mme. Adrien Tixier, whose husband—now in North Africa—formerly served as Gen. DeGaulle's personal representative in Washington, talked with Mme. Bethouart and scores of others who gathered around for latest word from M. Tixier. Mme. Tixier plans to be off soon to join him, and is now in the throes of getting all the necessary inoculations before her final departure plans are made. Mme. George-Picot, whose husband is in Algiers, was another in the throng; as were virtually all persons who have ever been identified with any French contingent here. Former French Premier Camille Chautemps and Mme. Chautemps came early and stayed late. Members of the Alliance Francaise seemed to be there in full force, along with scores of other Washingtonians, many of whom, including Miss Carolyn Nash and Mrs. R. H. Dunlap, lived in France in prewar days.

The State Department seemed to be turned out in full force, and practically all of the members of the Naval and Foreign Affairs Committees of both the Senate and the House; though Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, seemed to be the lone Cabinet representative. Secretary Hull, as well as the rest of the Cabinet, attended the White House dinner later.

"You Have to Blow Off the Foam"

Someone, noticing Representative "Cotton Ed" Smith" was present, went up and commented that it was the first time he'd been seen at an afternoon party. "I know," answered Cotton Ed, "and I feel like a —— —— fool."

Later, meeting up with Senator James J. Davis, a guest asked him if he didn't think it was drawing a rather fine line (if the rumor were true) that this Government would not recognize France until after the war because "there isn't any France now," whereas we have recognized both the Netherlands and Norway as countries in spite of their invaded status?

The gray-haired, gray-garbed Senator paused a moment and then parried with the classic comment, "Well, you know in a war, nothing is ever like it appears on the surface. It's like a political campaign, or a glass of beer. You have to blow the foam off first to see what the base of it is like."

Honors to Husbands Overseas Lifts Morale of Wives Here

Mrs. Robert H. Littlejohn, Mrs. Oscar B. Abbott Proudly Discuss Recent Decorations in London

By Patricia Grady

Decoration of our heroes abroad is wonderful for home-front morale, at least it has lifted the spirits of the two Washington service wives, Mrs. Robert H. Litflejohn and Mrs. Oscar B. Abbott, when they learned of recent honors bestowed on their husbands in London.

"My son had the chance to pin on his father's stars . . . something I've looked forward to doing since we were first married," said Mrs. Abbott proudly.

She has a picture of the ceremony that appeared in the Stars and Stripes when her son, Major Leonard J. Abbott, on duty in London, presented his father, Brig. Gen. Abbott, with the silver stars stars of his newly acquired rank two months ago. Gen. Abbott, who is G-1 for the European Theater of Operations Headquarters, was awarded the Legion of Merit Medal by Lieut. Gen. Jacob L. Devers during a ceremonial parade in London on Tuesday.

The general and his wife are practically native Washingtonians, for his tours of duty have brought him regularly to the Capital during the last decade. He came here in 1932 to attend the Army War College and after his graduation the next year was assigned to the General Staff for a four-year stint. Then came three years in Fort Worth, Tex., before he was again called back to Washington to the General Staff.

Father Follows Son to London

He went to London last September, in the wake of his major son, who had already been assigned to that theater. Major Abbott's wife and two young sons are making their home in Arlington. Another son, Capt. Albert W. Abbott, is assigned to the School of Military Government and is living in Charlottesville, Va., with his wife and two young sons.

Mrs. Abbott finds a good deal to keep her busy while the general is serving overseas. All sorts of wartime activities, including Red Cross, are on her weekly schedule. That with her business interests, housekeeping in her Kennedy-Warren apartment, and being the grandmother of four grandsons is more than enough to occupy her time.

When it is pointed out to her that her husband is still listed in the telephone book as "lieutenant colonel," Mrs. Abbott becomes almost apologetic. "I guess it will be straght in the next book," she says.

Advises Wives To Keep Busy

Mrs. Littlejohn admits that she was terribly excited about her husband's receiving the Distinguished Service Medal. As Chief Quartermaster of the Army Supply Forces in the European Theater, Brig. Gen. Littlejohn was given his award for organizing supplies during 1942 up to November and for aiding the North African landings.

Mrs. Littlejohn's prescription for the live-alone service wife is "try to keep busy, that's the only thing." She does it with volunteer work for Army Emergency Relief and by manning the AWVS booth at the Mayflower Hotel several nights a week. She makes her home at 1851 Columbia Road.

Miss Shea, Lieut. Coates Are Married

St. Michael's Church in Silver Spring was the setting yesterday of the marriage of Miss Margaret Mary Shea to Lieut. Thomas L. Coates of the Army Transport Service.

The bride is the daughter of Dr. Thomas J. Shea and the late Mrs. Shea and is a granddaughter of the late Cornelius D. Shea, a former political figure in Washington. Lieutenant Coates is the son of Ward B. Coates and the late Mrs. Coates.

Attending the bride was her sister, Miss Agatha C. Shea, and Ward B. Coates, father of the bridegroom, served as best man. After a brief wedding trip, the bride will return to Washington and Lieutenant Coates will report to his station at a Hampton Roads Port.

The couple are both graduates of the Columbus Law School and the bride is at present an attorney on the staff of the Office of the General Counsel of the Department of the Treasury.

Weddings Still Take Over Their Share of Washington Calendar

Miss Betty Frances O'Flynn Becomes Bride of Lieut. Edwin M. Peterson in New York

The month of brides is past. But the brides don't seem to know it, for the churches are so full of vow-taking couples that it looks as if July will be able to claim June's usual title this year.

Among recent weddings was that of Miss Betty Frances O'Flynn, daughter of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Geoffrey John O'Flynn of New York and Washington, who became the bride of Lieut. Edwin M. Peterson, U. S. A, son of Mrs. Madeleine Fannon Peterson of Jackson Heights, N. Y., in a ceremony in the church of St. Joan of Arc in Jackson Heights on Monday.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in white faille, fashioned with a fitted bodice and long, full sleeves of lace. The full skirt ended in a short train and her finger-tip veil of illusion fell from a coronet of seed pearls. She carried a colonial bouquet of white roses, gardenias and babies'-breath. The Rev. John J. Boylan officiated at the 10 o'clock ceremony.

Miss Patricia O'Flynn, a sister of the bride, was the only attendant. Her gown was of pale pink, made with a lace bodice and a full net skirt. She wore a matching Mary Queen of Scots hat, with a shoulder-length veil of net and carried a colonial bouquet of pink roses, carnations and delphiniums. Edward Monahan of Jersey City, N. J., served as best man.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Hotel Lexington in New York. After a short wedding trip the couple will make their home in Wilmington, N. C., where the bridegroom is on duty as an instructor in the Antiaircraft School at Camp Davis.

The bride, who is the former Miss Dorothy Hudgins, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Hudgins. Her husband is the son of Mrs. Margaret Boarman. Her father gave the bride in marrage at the ceremony for which she wore a gown of marquisette and lace, made with long sleeves and a train. Her finger-tip illusion veil was held in place by a coronet of orange blossoms and she carried a bouquet of white roses with an orchid center.

Miss Mildred Daniel, a cousin of the bride, was the maid of honor. Her dress was of aquamarine net and lace and she carried a nosegay of red roses. Miss Helen Hudgins, a sister of the bride, and Miss Louise Hudgins, a niece of the bride, were junior bridesmaids. One was dressed in peach net, the other in orchid. They both carried bouquets of mixed flowers. Pvt. Lewis Boarman served his brother as best man and the ushers were Nick Habel and Don Crawford.

Virginia Ace Praised in Officer's Letter

The Rev. and Mrs. Herbert Osburn of Leesburg, Va., are beaming with pride these days.

They are treasuring a letter that they have recently received about their son, Aviation Cadet Herbert Scott Osburn, U. S. A. A. F., from Maj. Gen. G. C. Brant. Wrote General Brant, "In a memorandum which came to my desk this morning, I note that your boy, an aviation cadet, has been specially selected for training as a navigator in the Army Air Forces. In order to win this war it is vital to have the best qualified young men in charge of navigating our bombardment airplanes.

"The position of navigator calls for a high degree of intelligence, alertness and coolness. Not only the success of the mission, but the safety of his crewmates, depends on the speed and skill with which he performs his calculations. Men who will make good material for training as navigators are rare. The classification board believes that your boy has the necessary reliability, character and mathematical aptitude. If he shows the progress we confidently expect of him, he will in all probability win his wings as a qualified navigator. Considering rigid requirements for this training, you have every reason to be proud of your boy today. I congratulate you and him."

Aviation Cadet Osburn has spent many summers of his life in Fauquier County with his grandparents, the late Robert Beverley and Mrs. Beverley, and has numbers of friends and relatives throughout the hunt country. He attended the Christ Church School and Washington and Lee University.

His younger brother, Robert Beverley Osburn, left a few days ago for induction at Camp Lee, Va., and has since been sent to Camp Wheeler, Ga. Robert finished his third year at the Episcopal High School in Alexandria, in June.

Senor Serpa in Washington At Invitation of State Department

"To get acquainted with the atmosphere of the United States at war and to realize the full extent of its friendly attitude toward the Latin-American republics" is what Enrique Serpa of Cuba considers the principal object of his trip to this country.

A guest of the State Department, Senor Serpa comes to the United States for the first time. As one of Cuba's outstanding newspapermen, he has won for four consecutive times the National Journalism Prize awarded by the Ministry of Public Education of his country. On his return to Cuba, Senor Serpa disclosed during a recent visit to the Pan American Union he intends to write not only a series of articles on the United States but also a book about his trip, so no wonder that, with the piercing eyes of a veteran reporter, he is "taking in" all he sees.

Accompanying Senor Serpa in his tour of the country is Dr. Nicolas G. Mendoza, Cuban lawyer who was for four years the director of the radio division of the Department of Communications of his country. Dr. Mendoza is a brother of Dr. Roberto Mendoza, onetime secretary of the Cuban Embassy here.

OUT OF MY MIND

Timid Soul

By Katharine Brush

Your correspondent is afraid of a great many things in life—including thunderstorms, and novocaine needles, and waterbugs, and taking off in a plane, and crossing a street in the dimout, and mice, and high places, and great crowds, and devastatingly witty women. I am also scared to death to eat oysters, even in season; and on those awful occasions known to us all when something goes down the wrong way, and we choke, I am always sure that this is the end of me, and that I'm done for. Furthermore, I always gloomily expect my slightest illness to be fatal—I'm like a man in that—and I make wills and everything. I even write Last Letters. I have been known to do it even with no temperature, and just a sniffle.

Sometimes I think I take the pessimistic view of almost everything. For instance, somebody who lives on a higher floor than mine in my apartment house occasionally throws his evening newspaper over the terrace wall when he's through reading it, and as it goes sailing past my window I always think it's a suicide, although he's been doing it for years. . . . When it's the Sunday paper it looks like two suicides, probably a love pact. . . . I am terrified to watch a high-up window washer, or a stunting flier, or a vaudeville acrobat; and at the circus I am simply miserable from start to finish. Just can't look, that's all. Eyes squeezed tight shut.

I don't trust swinging signs; or gratings in the street; or manhole covers; or escalators; or the parapets of skyscrapers; or the couplings of railroad cars. My favorite part of an elevator is that reassuring little document which tells you that the thing has very lately been inspected. I keep begging taxi drivers to slow down, and I'm so piteous about it that sometimes they actually DO—although, of course, never enough. Death leers at me from every pair of headlights when I walk in traffic. The stewards on planes can tell me that it's all right now to take my seatbelt off—but will I do it? Certainly not. I fly on grimly, belted like an earl.

It's all in my mind, I guess, because actually I've had no more than the usual number of really frightening experiences, and of REALLY narrow escapes (said she, knocking wood violently). I have had one automobile smashup, one emergency appendectomy, one ambulance ride (with sirens and everything, wheeee!)—and I was once in a slight train wreck. In the course of the automobile accident. I described a high parabola through air and landed on a pile of stones at the foot of an embankment, but managed through it all to keep tight hold of my powder compact which finally had to be pried out of my hand when they picked me up. The compact was never the same again, I might add; but the owner recovered

I have noticed that when something truly dangerous does happen to you in this world, you usually don't have time to be frightened—and even when you have and are, your emotion isn't so much fear as it is a kind of wrathful protest and a burning sense of injustice and indignity at your own helplessness. "Hey, STOP that!" you think, peremptorily—to the hurtling car, to the looming tidal wave. "Stop that RIGHT AWAY!" And it further enrages you to realize that nobody has ever told you what to do in a case like this, or how to act, or what the safest move might be . . .

For example, I was never angrier in my whole life than during the slight train wreck above mentioned. Seven cars were derailed, including mine, and two of them tipped over (NOT including mine)—and while we were lurching to a rip-snorting stop at a highly precarious angle, WHAT TO DO? Would it be wiser to flatten myself on the floor, or stay in my chair (if I could), or what? In a whole long lifetime spent listening to useless advice on every conceivable topic, had I ever heard even a hint that would be helpful or applicable now?

No—I had not—and as a result, my fury was all I could feel. "A fine world, this is!" I kept sputtering to myself, as mad as hops . . .

Not scared at all, you understand. Just awfully, awfully peevish. I know now that I'll probably die that way, when my

Grand Jurors To Investigate Coal Strikes

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

An investigation of continuing strikes by 18,000 insurgent coal miners appeared headed toward a Pittsburgh (Pa.) Federal grand jury yesterday, while in Washington President Roosevelt indicated that he did not think it feasible to direct John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, to accept contract terms ordered by the War Labor Board, thus enabling the restoration of the mines to private hands.

United States Attorney Charles F. Uhl at Pittsburgh disclosed that he had ordered an investigation of the wildcat work stoppages south of Pittsburgh which have been felt principally by so-called "captive" mines owned by steel companies.

Uhl said he had called a special meeting of a grand jury for next Wednesday to inquire into "matters of great importance"—presumably consideration of possible action under the newly passed Connally-Smith antistrike law against instigators of the continuing strikes.

U. M. W Not Striking

The strikes were not supported by the U. M. W. leadership which had secured the return to the pits of most of the country's 520,000 miners last week. There were instances reported yesterday of miners shattering tradition and smashing through picket lines to get to work.

Uhl said that he was making the investigation of an anti-work campaign by pickets at the request of Attorney General Francis Biddle.

The larger question of compliance with the WLB order outlining the terms of a proposed contract between the U. M. W. and the coal operators was raised by a reporter at the President's press conference. (Lewis has rejected this contract as an "infamous yellowdog contract.")

The President asked the reporter whether he should send a pink note and say please conform to the order.

Asked what action would be taken if Lewis continues his defiance of WLB, the President asked the reporter what he would do under the circumstances.

The reporter answered, "I don't know, Mr. President, but I am not the President."

The President pointed out that it was awfully hard to make a person sign something if he refused.

A reporter pointed out that Mr. Roosevelt had persuaded Sewell Avery, president of Montgomery Ward, to sign a WLB-ordered contract. The President replied that the Government has sanctions in the Montgomery Ward case—the power to take over its property. He said he did not know of any similar authority to take over the United Mine Workers.

The question of sanctions against the U. M. W. was raised by the War Labor Board in a letter to President Roosevelt asking him to use all the power at his disposal to enforce its directive. It was understood that the WLB hoped the President would first order Lewis to accept the WLB order. In the event of a refusal, WLB contemplated possible use of such sanctions as revocation of the present checkoff of union dues under government operation or sequestering of union funds.

Cites New Law

Because WLB members believe that it would be unfair to impose further sanctions against recalcitrant employers while it is unable to impose sanctions on a defiant union, the board has refrained from pressing for action on several defiance cases involving employers for the present.

Asked if he needed sanctions against recalcitrant unions, the President suggested that reporters look to the new antistrike law—the one which may be invoked in Pittsburgh.

The law provides criminal penalties for striking a Government owned plant or mine, but the penalties would not apply once the mines are returned to private owners. A year in jail and a $5000 fine are the maximum penalties.

The United States Steel Corp. announced at Pittsburgh its huge Clairton by products coke plant was cut from 100 to 80 per cent operation today and a further cut to 50 per cent operation may be made tomorrow. Three U. S. Steel blast furnaces are still closed.

Roving pickets in the Fayette County, Pa., coking coal area accompanied in some instances by women and children were startled to meet with open opposition by U. M. W. miners.

Ignoring the curses and cat-calls of 40 pickets several hundred men drove determinedly past them to work at the Big Gates mine of the H. C. Frick Coke Co., a U. S. Steel subsidiary.

7 Dead, Crews Race to Free Men Trapped by Chicago Fire

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 9.—Grim rescue crews, spurning the danger of weakened walls and spurred by agonized pleas for help, dug the bodies of the living and the dead from the wreckage of a building today in the aftermath of a tragic accident that cost the lives of seven members of the fire department.

Five of the victims perished in tons of rubble after the roof and floors of the structure collapsed. Four others were extricated alive after being trapped as long as 11 hours, but two of them died later. In addition, four other men were injured seriously enough to be taken to hospitals.

The tragedy was the worst in Chicago, from a standpoint of department casualties, in 19 years.

The fire-fighters turned out at 2 a. m. to combat a blaze in a four-story factory-garage building. About 20 of them were inside—most of them on the stairs between the third and fourth floors—when the roof fell. Then the topmost quarter of the front wall toppled inward. Next, the stairways bumped down, story by story. Finally the three top floors caved in.

Timber, plaster, brick and steel cascaded down to the street level and basement. Some men scrambled out quickly. Others freed themselves and escaped. Five were crushed to death. Four were entombed alive—Capt. Matthew McDonough and Firemen Richard Jablonski, Joseph Strenski and Robert Walsh.

McDonough, with only his boots visible, beseeched: "For God's sake, hurry."

The priest asked Jablonski to repeat the Act of Contrition.

"Father," he replied weakly, "I've said it a thousand times since I've been here."

Walsh and Jablonski died after they were rushed to hospitals. McDonough and Strenski were given a chance to recover.

The other dead were Acting Battalion Chief Arthur Barcal, Capt. Henry Wurthman, Lieut. Edward Moffett and Firemen Thomas McCarthy and Harry Weinel.

Wright Field officials declined to give any details of how the collision occurred, other than the planes were on routine flights and crashed at "low altitude."

Probe Begun In Explosion At Capitol

An immediate investigation was launched yesterday into the cause of a mysterious explosion at the Capitol power plant, which shattered windows, wrecked power machinery, stalled elevators, and cut off power in the Capitol, Senate and House office buildings, the Supreme Court and the Library of Congress.

David C. Lynn, architect of the Capitol, sent a number of electrical engineers to the scene, whose final report is expected today.

In advance of the report, Lynn said that the investigators discounted the possibility of sabotage, and believed the blast to be the result of a gas explosion.

A number of Capitol employes and visitors were in elevators stalled between floors for 30 minutes after the explosion, which rocked the entire neighborhood.

Thirty windows in the power plant were wrecked and untold damage done to machinery. Service was restored when auxiliary generators were put in action.

Only service not restored was air-conditioning in the buildings. The air-conditioning system will not function, Lynn said, until the power plant is back in operation.

"Hit Parade" Brings One To Metropolitan Screen

Susan Hayward and John Carroll Lead Splendid Cast in Excellent Musical; Interesting Shorts Complete Fine Bill

"HIT PARADE OF 1943." Republic picturization of an original musical screenplay by Frank Gill, Jr., with additional dialogue by Frances Hyland and music and lyrics by Jule Styne and Harold Adamson, costarring John Carroll and Susan Hayward, with Gail Patrick, Eve Arden, Melville Cooper, Walter Catlett, Mary Treen, Tom Kennedy, Astrid Allwyn and Tim Ryan. Directed by Albert S. Rogell. At the Metropolitan Theater.

IN ITS THIRD "HIT PARADE" in the series that began in 1937, Republic has really come through with a hit.

The "Hit Parade of 1943," revealed to a Washington audience for the first time yesterday morning on the screen at the Metropolitan Theater, embodies everything that a Grade-A musical should have —a richly diversified score, a well-balanced and engaging cast, humor, romance, three "name" bands, a half-dozen or so top-flight specialty artists and, most amazing of all, a coherent, logical and thoroughly interesting story.

To be sure, the plot wanders in and out of the night clubs and broadcasting studios, as well as the apartments and offices of its principal characters, but it does so with complete justification. The plot this time hinges on the indelicate art of song piracy on the part of a brash young fellow who attempts to find his way into the "hit parade" via the airwaves and the night spots. The numbers that bring him greatest renown are the creations, both lyrics and music, of a smalltown gal who arrives among the Broadway wolves just in time to discover the swindle being perpetrated by the one-man Miracle Music Publishing Co.

Since Jill Wright has had the good judgment to copyright her compositions, she is content to sit by and watch Rick Farrell pile up fame and fortune at her expense. She even collaborates with him by turning out singlehanded all the catchy things upon which his name appears, with the idea, when the time is ripe, of exposing the whole shady business in court and shaking Mr. Farrell loose from his reputation and all his worldly goods, save only his other shirt.

It doesn't work out quite like that, but it does work out well enough to supply the groundwork for an exceptionally diverting entertainment.

Among the other amusing devices contrived by Scenarist Frank Gill, jr., is the mechanical gadget employed by tyros in the song-writing business to facilitate the rhyming of lyrics. In view of some that are foisted on the public, one is tempted to believe it could be! Another point of superiority in the present film is the naturalness and unobtrusiveness with which the specialties are woven into the unstrained and smooth-flowing narrative. Every one of them is precisely where it belongs, and for good and sufficient reason. Jule Styne and Harold Adamson have come up with a tuneful group of songs and the settings, while not the last word in opulence, glittering and unbelievable magnitude, still are pretty imposing now and again and are doubly effective by holding themselves in bounds. Republic in this one, has done a superlative job.

Principals Give Picture Normal Touch

The cast has matched the acumen of the producers and Director Al Rogell in keeping both action and dialogue within reason. There is no "pressing" for laughs in a subject that is funny enough in its situations and dialogue to be "played straight."

The one outstanding revelation made by "Hit Parade of 1943" is that Susan Hayward is a versatile and charming comedienne whose talents, for some inexplicable reason, heretofore have been smothered by Hollywood. She plays the role of Jill delightfully, sings acceptably and, for once, brings conviction to musical comedy. In the opposite part of Rick, the harmonic "heel," John Carroll performs with buoyancy and bounce and sings in his best voice, which is one of the cinema's better barytones. Gail Patrick is a highly efficient "menace" to the romance that gives the story its point and the comedy score is run up by Eve Arden, as Jill's cynical pal, and Walter Catlett, as Rick's—two of the most able funsters in the theater Melville Cooper, as the night club impresario; Mary Treen, Tom Kennedy, as a janitor masquerading as a butler; Astrid Allwyn and Tim Ryan fill in the lesser niches nicely.

In the incidental specialties, so essential to the rounded whole, Jack Williams, the Harlem Sandman; Dorothy Dandridge, singing with Count Basie's Orchestra; Pops and Louis, two extraordinary male dancers; the Music Maids and the Three Cheers, in harmonizing vocals; Chinita, an exotic dancer, and the incomparable Golden Gate Quartet are given just enough to do to make the spectator wish they had more. The Freddy Martin and Ray McKinley orchestras and the Basie band, as we were saying, are perfectly spotted.

"Lift Your Head," the unique Victory Reel being shown all over town; a short-reel devoted to Bing Crosby, Bob Hope and practically all the golf champs there are, in play at the Rancho Sante Fe course, and a comprehensive news survey are the auxiliaries of a major feature that any lover of music and fun would be foolhardy to miss.

Shiny, New Stage Bill at Earle

By Marjorie Kelly

If the gala fashion exhibit, "Ladies at Arms," which leads off the new stage bill at the Earle, was designed to stimulate recruiting by showing the gals how glamorous they can be in uniform, well, sir, it's just about perfect for the purpose.

Even your correspondent, who has long since been immune to the appeal of uniforms (on girls), felt a tug of envy at this display of what the always well-dressed servicewoman wears. Probably it was because whoever planned the specialty has apparently gone to a great deal of trouble to get the prettiest WACS, WAVES, MARINES, and SPARS in town to model the various costumes of the four branches of service. Anyway, the gals do their uniform justice.

Lieut. Barbara Smith, who introduces them, is not outshone by her bevy of models, either.

As we were saying, from the recruiting angle, this is an effective business. But if the idea was to convey information about what the insignia are and how to identify women from the various branches, as Lieutenant Smith's comments would seem to indicate, we rather doubt that many people, confronted with all that uniformed pulchritude, heard much of the accompanying discourse.

Three members of the naval forces opened the "Ladies at Arms" act. Lieutenant Tipton plays "Sugar Blues" on a cornet which he handles very effectively; Seaman Williamson sings "Night and Day," and Chief Petty Officer P. O. Schallen, "It Can't Be Wrong."

Arnauts Score Again

Most entertaining act in the line-up, for our money, is the Arnaut Brothers, doing an echo routine with two violins, and a "love-bird" whistling duet, in which they succeeded better than anybody we ever heard in making the whistles sound like conversation. They do it by reproducing the inflections of a set of banal remarks so often heard as to leave no doubt what the satire intends.

Capella and Patricia, billed as the "newest and most sophisticated dance team in America," contribute a group of dances which are as graceful as they are difficult. Patricia is most personable in a red and silver costume of net and spangles.

The Roxyettes appear in three routines, a "Gun Drill," which follows the "Ladies at Arms," in which, lovely and earnest as always, the girls' flag-ornamented guns go through the paces which a Marine drill sergeant taught them; and a number with sequin fans which illustrates impressively the striking things which can be done with them.

The screen feature, held over from last week, is "Background to Danger" a rather far-fetched tale of intrigue in Turkey, most of which revolves about George Raft as a G-man. Sidney Greenstreet, Peter Lorre and Brenda Marshall are also prominently cast.

Nice Work, if You Can Get It—He Did!

GAIL PATRICK, JOHN CARROLL, SUSAN HAYWARD three of the principal players in Republic's musical production of "Hit Parade of 1943," which yesterday began its first Washington engagement on the screen at the Metropolitan Theater. Eve Arden, Walter Catlett and others of note, along with three "name" bands and numerous specialty artists, also are prominently placed

HEDDA HOPPER

Reunion in "Tropicana"

Hollywood, Calif., July 9. — Xavier Cugat and Mae West are having a reunion on the "Tropicana" set. He appeared in her last picture, "Go West, Young Man." In this he's not only a band leader but leading man. But I don't think he'll ever take the place of Cary Grant, do you? Katharine Hepburn has the largest collection of his rhumba recordings, some of them so old he's trying to get 'em back . . . Bob Alda, who'll play Gershwin, is having his 8-year-old son tested for the part of George as a child. Papa is taking piano lessons like mad. Oscar Levant plays himself in the picture . . . Mark Hellinger's revival of "Outward Bound" will star Cedric Hardwicke. Remember when the late Leslie Howard did it? . . . Sam Wood has talked Ingrid Bergman into going to New York for the opening of "For Whom the Bell Tolls." She leaves Sunday . . . Phil Baker will have to start those running lessons, 'cause Mitzi Bruce is New York bound . . . Now that it's set for Harry Joe Brown to produce "Knickerbocker Holiday," he's working harder than ever to get Walter Huston for it.

MAE WEST

Perfect for It

Howard Emmett Rogers moved over to Twentieth Century to work with Paul Green on "The Life of Eddie Rickenbacker" for Winnie Sheehan. From Metro I'm told Vic Fleming is trying to make a deal to direct it . . . Carmen Miranda won't have Alice Faye as her companion on her South American vacation following her emergency operation. Her sister goes along. Carmen's first film on her return will be "Greenwich Village" instead of "Mexico City" . . . Ham has developed in Harry Sherman. He can't resist any longer—he'll play a bit in "Buffalo Bill" . . . Harry James got an unexpected wedding present when Betty Grable became his—a reclassification of his draft status. He no longer has two babies to support . . . Eve Gabor's stopped wearing those large, lacy hats, now she's being beaued by Ernst Lubitsch. His cigars might start a conflagration . . . Fred Astaire is home from that camp tour, elated mentally, but an exclamation point physically.

Do-Gooder

When Charles Francis Coe speaks at our chamber of commerce dinner the big-wigs of the industry will be listening, also businessmen of our town. His subject: "Hollywood Looks Toward a New World" . . . Garbo is tenth on the list of favorites in Sweden. I doubt whether she would have made that spot if her fans had seen her in soiled shorts, horrible hat and blackest glasses, lunching at the Market the other day. No, G. G., soap hasn't yet been rationed . . . The town is much gayer since Ed Gardner (Archie of Duffy's Tavern) arrived. He was just as funny when he was here before, but not quite so successful, which makes a heap of difference in our town . . . Jack Cummings tells me when Eleanor Powell's films play in England they never take in less than a million.

Coincidence

Col. Victor Cazelet, M. P., who lost his life when Gen. Sikorski's plane crashed, was godfather of little Elizabeth Taylor, who costarred with Roddy McDowall in "Lassie Come Home." When Victor was in New York recently, it was hoped he could see the picture, but it hadn't yet been finished. It was en route to him in England when he crashed. Strange, too, that Eric Knight, who wrote, "Lassie," also died in a plane crash . . . Metro's "Harvey Girls" is being turned into a musical in color with an all-star cast, Johnny Mercer and Harry Warren doing the music . . . Lloyd Pantages, with sight of only one eye, writes from Guadalcanal that he sure could use a seeing eye dog when he's on guard duty . . . Douglas Fairbanks, jr., back to North Africa.

That Did It

Joy Hodges' husband, Paul Dudley was so pleased with her in "Doughgirls" he mailed her a regular contract with this note, "I'm picking up my lifetime option on you" . . . Akim Tamiroff recorded his comic skit, "How an American Soldier Should Behave in Russia," on a platter. It's that funny . . .

LEONARD LYONS

Times Square Tattle

New York, July 9.

Some time ago, in Moscow, an American newspaper man was seen in the constant company of a pretty Russian girl, until he suddenly returned to America. He heard a report that the girl had mysteriously been transferred to Siberia—that her employers believed that the newspaper man had toyed with her affections only for the purpose of obtaining information . . . the distraught correspondent enlisted the aid of Wendell Willkie. "I'm in love with her," he stated. I'm going back to Russia, to marry her. Can you help me get her out of Siberia?" . . . Willkie sent a cable to Stalin. Wars, even in Russia, stop for Love. Within a few days the Soviet Embassy in Washington notified Willkie that because he was vouching for the sincerity of the newspaper man, an exception was being made, and the lady is back in Moscow.

WALLIS WINDSOR

Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt brought some friends from Texas with her to Washington. "You're going to stay with me at the White House," she told them. The ladies eagerly awaited the night they would spend sleeping in the most famous building in the world. . . . The President's daughter-in-law sent their baggage on to the White House. took her guests on a tour of Washington, completed the tour at 5 a. m.—and they all arose at 7 a. m.

While the Duke and Duchess of Windsor were in Miami Beach, they visited Kitty Davis', which is frequented principally by soldiers. One soldier finally found his way to the place next to the Duchess, and then planted a kiss on her cheek. "They can do anything to me now," he announced. "This is the closest I'll ever come to kissing a Queen."

A Broadway press-agent flew to Los Angeles recently. At La Guardia Field, he noticed that Herbert Hoover was a passenger. "If somebody's going to be taken off this plane for lack of a priority," the press-agent lamented, "I think it'll be me." . . . He quickly purchased some bandages, wound them around his right leg, and limped into the plane. He told the stewardess that he must have the first chair, to avoid any bumping. "I've got to take care of this leg," he moaned to her . . . In Colorado. where an Army man entered the plane, one passenger had to be removed. "We can't move that man with the bandaged leg," the officials ruled. So Hoover had to leave.

Hank Ladd, who replaced Phil Baker in "Broadway Priorities" last year, accompanied Bert Wheeler on an emergency USO assignment in Alaska. They visited every Army base there, in midwinter sub-zero weather . . . When Wheeler and Ladd returned to the States and finally thawed out, they were asked about the reception they had received. "In one place, deep in Alaska," Ladd replied, "the Mayor gave me the ice-pick to the city."

When Jay Allen, the war correspondent, went to North Africa last fall, his Irish setter Paycock was enlisted with Dogs for Defense. Paycock now is back home—practically 4-F—for despite the Army's guard-training, he liked everybody, including saboteurs . . . Harold Ross has the largest private collection of Gideon Bibles. Dave Chasen, now a restaurateur, sent Ross a copy from every hotel at which he stopped, during his long tour with the musical "Hold Your Horses"

Norway's Patriots Will See 'Darkness'

Hollywood.—At the request of scores of leaders of Sons of Norway organizations on both coasts, special screenings of "Edge of Darkness" will be shown members of the groups. The film, starring Errol Flynn and Ann Sheridan, is a story of Norway's continuing fight against the Nazis.
